□ 1745

NATIONAL DEFENSE AUTHORIZATION ACT FOR FISCAL YEAR 2011—Continued

Mr. MCKEON. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 1 minute.

Mr. Chairman, let me read again, in case I inadequately expressed it before. This is the letter from Secretary Gates that he told Chairman SKELTON two days ago that he still stands by strongly:

Therefore, I strongly oppose any legislation that seeks to change this policy prior to the completion of this vital assessment process.

This is a process that was set in place when the President made his comments at the State of the Union that he wanted the Don't Ask, Don't Tell policy repealed before the end of the year. The Secretary took him at his word and set up a process. The process would go out to all of the military and their spouses and give them a chance to respond. The military would then have a chance to go over that and give their best military advice to the President and to the Congress as to how we should move forward at that time. That report is due by the first of December.

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Chairman, I am pleased to yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from California (Mr. GARAMENDI), who has had some important personal experience with the issue contained in the Murphy amendment.

Mr. GARAMENDI. I thank my colleague from New Jersey for yielding.

I was elected in a special election last November. One of my opponents was an extraordinary young man, an African American. Raised in Fairfield, California, he went to West Point. Very successful, he served in Iraq two tours and came out a captain. He took his team there twice. On both those tours, all of them were in very dangerous circumstances.

He came home. He came back to America and could no longer tolerate the Don't Ask, Don't Tell policy. He came out of the closet. An extraordinary loss. Fortunately, I had another idea about who might be the next Congressman. But this man could have been a general leading the entire Army, an extraordinary person.

We lost that talent because of this policy, and it is time for this policy to end. If only the President had the power that Truman did when he said, enough already, we are going to integrate the Army.

We need to complete that integration. The Murphy amendment is absolutely essential.

I yield back the balance of my time. Mr. MCKEON. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself the balance of my time.

Mr. Chairman, I know we have differences of opinion on this, and we all have stories, as we just heard from my good friend Mr. GARAMENDI from my home State. We have stories on both sides of the issue. The problem is, those are one person here, one person here. Maybe we talk to 10. Maybe we talk to 20. But we have 2.5 million people serving, and all of them should have a chance to have input. That is what they were promised. That is what they were told. Now we are short-circuiting that process.

So all I am saying is we should respect all of the people and their families that are serving now in the armed services and follow through with the things we said.

When I talked the other day to Admiral Roughead, the Chief of Naval Operations, his concern was that if we take action now with the vote on this Murphy amendment tonight which repeals Don't Ask, Don't Tell, he said it is going to cause confusion in the force, because we just hired this company to go out and do the survey, to follow through on this process that has been started. They are going to be going out into the field asking questions.

What he said is, this is going to cause confusion, because as one of the other Chiefs said, the headline, once this passes, if it passes, will be "Don't Ask, Don't Tell is repealed." So when the survey goes out into the field, when they put together focus groups and the surveys and all the things they are doing in response to this process that has been started, it is moot.

The Acting CHAIR. The gentleman's time has expired.

The gentleman from New Jersey has 15 seconds remaining.

Mr. ANDREWS. I yield the balance of my time to my friend from California (Mr. GARAMENDI).

Mr. GARAMENDI. I am sure the admiral is able to read the amendment and would understand it doesn't go into effect until the command structure, including the President of the United States, says it is okay and the review has been completed.

Mr. PLATTS. Mr. Chair, I rise in support of this important amendment and I thank my friend from New Jersey, BILL PASCRELL, for allowing me to work with him on this issue. The Department of Defense and the RAND Corporation have recently estimated that 20 percent of our military personnel who have served in Iraq or Afghanistan have suffered a Traumatic Brain Injury (TBI).

Because symptoms of TBI often go unnoticed, at least initially, it is difficult to know exactly how many troops are living with this disability. If not diagnosed early on, TBIs can lead to memory loss, severe headache disorders, and alcohol and drug abuse.

Neurocognitive assessment has been proven to be an effective tool in detecting and measuring the severity of TBI. This is why the fiscal year 2008 National Defense Authorization required the Department of Defense to screen ALL military personnel for TBI both before and after deployment. Post-deployment screenings are to be compared with pre-deployment (or baseline) assessments to determine whether or not the servicemember is suffering from a TBI.

Unfortunately, too many of our men and women returning from the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan are still not being screened for TBI.

Servicemembers that have been screened post-deployment are currently given a self-assessment checklist, in which the results are not even comparable to their pre-deployment neurocognitive screenings. Not to mention that because the checklist is self-administered, the results are typically inaccurate since these troops either do not realize or do not want to admit that they are living with a TBI.

I am pleased that this year's Defense Authorization includes language requiring the Department of Defense to implement a comprehensive screening and assessment policy by the end of 2011. However, until this policy is fully implemented, thousands of our men and women in uniform are returning from combat without the necessary screenings to ensure that they receive proper treatment.

This amendment, which I am proud to have introduced with Congressmen PASCARELL, ANDREWS, COLE, ORTIZ, COFFMAN and JOE WILSON, will ensure that until the Department of Defense has put in place a comprehensive screening policy, all of our military personnel will receive neurocognitive assessments both before and after deployment. The amendment requires that the same neurocognitive tool used for pre-deployment assessment also be used for post-deployment evaluation. Using the same test allows physicians to compare the baseline screening with the post-deployment results to determine whether a TBI does in fact exist. The current system of using different tools for pre- and post-deployment screenings is like comparing apples to oranges. It is essential that our men and women who put themselves in harm's way to protect us every day receive immediate and appropriate care.

There are currently a number of neurocognitive tools available for the Department of Defense to use for screenings. Several of the branches have initiated comparative studies assessing the effectiveness of the various tools, however, most have yet to be completed. The amendment also requires the Department of Defense to oversee the completion of all outstanding studies and conduct an analysis of the options available.

Though TBIs are difficult to detect because no one symptom exists, it is imperative that the Department of Defense take every possible measure to diagnose and treat our troops effected by TBI. This is why I strongly support this amendment and I encourage all of my colleagues to do the same.

Mr. HARE. Mr. Chair, I'd like to begin by thanking my friend Chairman SKELTON, for his unwavering commitment to our Nation's defense and the warfighter.

Mr. Chair, I rise in strong support of my amendment included in En Bloc package 3.

Mr. Chair, my amendment simply asks the Army Secretary to report to Congress with the details of the Heirloom Chest policy, plans to continue the program and a cost estimate of expanding it.

The Heirloom Chest is presented by the Army to families in memory of soldiers who have fallen in the defense of our Nation. Under the Army's policy, in the case of separated, divorced, or unmarried parents, the chest is given to only one surviving parent.

While I applaud the Army's efforts to support surviving families, I believe this policy ignores the loss that both parents share and has also unintentionally put added strain on bereaving parents.

Mr. Chair, the intent of my amendment is to ensure the sacrifice of both surviving parents is properly recognized. Families of the fallen have made the ultimate sacrifice, and it is our duty to honor the sacrifice of all survivors.

I urge my colleagues to support this en bloc amendment and the underlying bill.

The Acting CHAIR. All time has expired.

The question is on the amendments en bloc offered by the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. ANDREWS).

The amendments en bloc were agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 18 OFFERED BY MR. DINGELL OF MICHIGAN

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Page 84, after line 24, insert the following:

SEC. 315. INFORMATION SHARING RELATING TO INVESTIGATION OF EXPOSURE TO DRINKING WATER CONTAMINATION AT CAMP LEJEUNE, NORTH CAROLINA.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress makes the following findings:

(1) The Secretary of the Navy and Commandant of the Marine Corps are responsible for the identification and timely sharing of all relevant records relating to the Camp Lejeune base-wide drinking-water systems, including all records of which the Agency for Toxic Substances and Disease Registry (hereinafter in this section referred to as the "ATSDR") may not be aware and all records that are in the possession of the Department of Defense, and all contractors, sub-contractors, and consultants of the Department but may no longer be located at the Camp Lejeune base.

(2) On April 28, 2009, during a Camp Lejeune Community Assistance Panel (hereinafter in this section referred to as "CAP") meeting, it was stated by the ATSDR that it had recently discovered electronic data on a "hundred or more underground storage and above-ground storage tanks" housed on a Naval Facilities Engineering Command Internet web portal.

(3) This revelation occurred after the ATSDR requested in 2005 that all relevant data for its health studies be turned over from the Department of Defense to the agency, and the response by the Department's CAP representative was that the information was "not new, just newly found."

(4) On March 22, 2010, the ATSDR stated in a letter to the Navy and Marine Corps that the ATSDR was informed for the first time of an electronic database containing approximately 700,000 records of analytical data.

(5) In a response letter, dated March 26, 2010, the Navy stated that "the Marine Corps is neither in a position to determine the relevance of information nor does it have the subject matter expertise to determine the relevance of documents in all cases."

(6) It is necessary that the Secretary of the Navy be required to add or assign personnel with the relevant expertise to complete the transfer of all documents and materials pertaining to the contaminated drinking water at Camp Lejeune.

(7) Discovery of such records must not rely on specific requests from the ATSDR but on a shared goal of ensuring the scientific accuracy of the current health study and the responsibility of the Secretary of Defense to provide such information.

(b) REQUIREMENT.—By not later than 90 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense shall provide ATSDR with an electronic inventory of all existing documents, records, and electronic data pertaining to the CERCLA listed and RCRA listed contamination sites at Camp Lejeune and all existing documents, records, and electronic data pertaining to the contaminated drinking water at Camp Lejeune. If after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense generates new documents, records and electronic data, or comes into possession of existing documents, records or electronic data not previously included in the electronic inventory, the Secretary of the Navy shall provide ATSDR with an updated electronic inventory incorporating the newly located or generated documents, records and electronic data. The Secretary of the Navy shall ensure that Department of Defense personnel with appropriate experience and expertise, including in the area of environmental engineering and the conduct of water modeling, working in conjunction with ATSDR, are utilized to identify, compile, and submit existing and new documents, records, and electronic data in Navy and Marine Corps records and electronic libraries that would assist the ATSDR in gathering data relating to the contamination and remediation of Camp Lejeune base-wide drinking-water systems.

Mr. McKEON (during the reading). Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to dispense with the reading.

The Acting CHAIR. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

The Acting CHAIR. Pursuant to House Resolution 1404, the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. SKELTON) and the gentleman from California (Mr. McKEON) each will control 10 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. SKELTON. Mr. Chairman, I urge the committee to adopt the amendments en bloc, all of which have been examined by both the majority and the minority.

Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to my colleague, the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. ETHERIDGE).

Mr. ETHERIDGE. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Chairman, I rise today in support of the en bloc amendments to the National Defense Authorization Act and in support of the underlying bill.

We in North Carolina are rightly proud of our military, and we understand that as they serve us, we must provide them with what they need to get their job done. This bill does just that, authorizing funds for troops, for our veterans, and for our military families.

My amendment, which I offered with my colleagues Mr. KISSELL and Mr. BISHOP of Georgia, would enhance our support for the military and the communities they live in. It would reinforce Congress' commitment to the quality of life for America's soldiers, officers, civilians, and their families.

Supporting our troops means supporting military families and the communities they call home. Military facilities bring significant benefits to our communities, but they also bring significant strain on those communities. Our amendment clarifies that when the military plans rapid growth in an area, the Department can join with the affected community to prepare for that growth. It empowers our communities to make strategic planned investments to respond to the strategic planned transition for BRAC.

I thank the chairman for including it in the en bloc amendment, and I urge my colleagues to support the amendment and the authorization bill.

Mr. McKEON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Florida (Mr. PUTNAM), who is the author of one of the amendments.

Mr. PUTNAM. I thank the ranking member and the chairman from Missouri for their support of this and their inclusion of it in the en bloc amendment.

It is a small change in the big scheme of things, but one which I believe will have a tremendous impact, not only on our active duty personnel, but on our men and women who are returning.

It is rooted in an experience in watching the success of these wounded warrior projects, where we have special opportunity hunts for men and women who are returning back to the States and getting reacquainted with the sport that they love so much.

There are over 400 military installations across the country that allow for recreational hunting and fishing on their property. They are managed individually by the local commanders.

They allow the public to access these areas by providing a tremendous benefit to those neighboring communities by allowing them to share in the natural resources. By allowing the public to access these areas and enjoy these lands, the Department of Defense helps to establish positive relationships between the Department and the civilian population.

Last month, the President launched his great outdoors conservation initiative, where recreational hunters and fishermen are recognized for having led the charge in the area of conservation, and the benefit of these military installations should be considered in that initiative. The greater access we have to enjoy the outdoors and promote these activities will help to promote conservation for future generations and healthier lifestyles.

I want to point out that in addition to the access, you have the accessibility issues. Hydraulic lifts, wheelchair-accessible duck blinds, docks, hunting stands, are minor improvements that mean a great deal to those men and women who are coming home. Only 20 of those 400 sites though are currently accessible for our disabled, and I believe we cannot underestimate the value of making those improvements to give them the opportunity to share in those outdoor experiences.

Mr. Chairman, we should support the military installations which provide these opportunities for the public and for our veterans and encourage them to continue to do so, where appropriate, and urge the Department of Defense to make more of these facilities accessible for our veterans.

Mr. SKELTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to my friend, the gentleman from Texas (Ms. JACKSON LEE).

Ms. JACKSON LEE of Texas. Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman.

I rise in support of the bill for the purpose of engaging in a colloquy with the chairman. I would like to discuss the important role the National Aeronautics and Space Administration plays in our national security. In fact, I had legislation that established NASA as a national security asset.

Chairman SKELTON, would you agree that our national security space programs are closely linked to NASA and that termination of the human spaceflight program could result in serious consequences for our space launch?

Further, do you agree that NASA's space programs have made important contributions to our national and homeland security, economic security, international standing, and technological competitiveness?

Finally, it is my hope that the Department of Defense will carefully assess the national security assets that may be possessed by NASA.

Mr. SKELTON. I certainly thank the gentlelady from Texas for her observations.

Yes, of course, I agree that NASA space programs have made important contributions to our national security. In specific response to your concern, the industrial base required for reliable space launch could be placed at risk by the proposed changes in the human spaceflight program. Further, I understand the department is carefully evaluating the impact of those changes.

Ms. JACKSON LEE of Texas. Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman.

My colleagues and I who are working on this issue appreciate your view. Transferring funds from the human spaceflight program to unproven commercial space efforts designed to carry humans and cargo into space is unreasonable and may be an unreasonable risk that this country should not take at this time. I hope that we can work together on this issue to ensure the continuation of human spaceflight programs.

Thank you, Mr. SKELTON, for supporting NASA.

Mr. McKEON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. GOHMERT).

Mr. GOHMERT. Mr. Chairman, we heard our colleague across the aisle talking about the Don't Ask, Don't Tell. Obviously, this is supposed to be about a block of amendments, and I don't have objection to those, so I would like to use this time to address that issue.

This body, leaders in this body, the White House, from the President to the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs and the Secretary of Defense, have promised our men and women who wear the uniform that their opinion will be considered.

A survey and study are being done.

Now, we've heard about individual cases where this person ended up getting out. As we heard, he couldn't keep his sexual urges private, and so he had to make them overt and therefore he was out-processed.

The policy has been, as long as the sexuality is a private matter, then it doesn't damage the mission of the military. But when it becomes overt, whether it's an officer having a heterosexual affair, or whether it's overt homosexuality, through the history of the military, it has been a problem to the ongoing morale of the military and accomplishment of the mission. Anything that detracts from the mission should be eliminated.

So the message here is, the hundreds of people that have urged me, please fight for us and what we believe in, because I've heard from so many, if you push this through, we're out. We're done.

We hear some isolated cases, but please, let's don't do damage to the military and break our promise to them, let's wait till the study is completed.

Mr. SKELTON. Mr. Chairman, pursuant to section 4 of House Resolution 1404, I hereby give notice that the amendments numbered 15 and 62 may be offered out of order.

The Acting CHAIR (Mr. POMEROY). The gentleman's request is noted.

Mr. SKELTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Tennessee (Mr. COHEN), my friend and colleague.

Mr. COHEN. Mr. Chairman, before I begin, I would like to Commend Congressmen POLIS and LANGEVIN for their work on this important amendment.

The amendment we've offered will play an important role in safeguarding a healthy American environment and ensuring American taxpayers are not forced to subsidize the production of highly polluting energy resources.

Let me be clear. This amendment in no way restricts Federal agencies' ability to procure readily available fuels. Instead, it clarifies that under section 526 of the 2007 Energy Independence and Security Act, Federal agencies may purchase fuel that is not predominantly derived from higher carbon content sources like tar sands and coal to liquid.

Turning coal into liquid fuel produces up to twice as much greenhouse gas pollution per unit of energy as conventional petroleum fuel, and fuel processed from tar sands generates 14-42 percent more greenhouse gas pollution per unit of energy compared to production of conventional petroleum fuels.

Further, the extraction or production of these fuels is also incredibly destructive to an environment that is already suffering.

The Federal Government should not play an inappropriate role subsidizing the production of these outdated, dirty energy sources, especially as we work to move our Nation toward a clean energy future.

However, today most, if not all, publicly available fuel containing tar sands oil contains only small amounts of that resource. Therefore, this amendment would not affect the ability of the Defense Department or other Federal agencies to continue to process tar sands oil.

However, section 526 has successfully protected taxpayers from costly and destructive subsidies of highly polluting fuel production and will continue to encourage deployment of clean energy production from domestic sources.

This amendment passed by unanimous recorded vote last year, and I, along with my colleagues, Congressmen POLIS and LANGEVIN, urge a "yes" vote today.

Mr. McKEON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. AKIN).

Mr. AKIN. Mr. Chairman, it's a treat to be able to rise and say the en bloc amendment is fine, just as most of what is in the bill is fine.

Unfortunately, there is an amendment that's being offered which threatens to poison the entire package and to do great damage to our military, and that is an issue that you've heard from earlier this day, the idea of repealing the Don't Ask, Don't Tell legislation.

Now, the way it works currently in the military is that if you happen to be homosexual and you want to serve in the military, that's fine. And as long as your particular sexual tastes don't get in the way of performing the mission, there's no problem.

The point is that the military has a job to protect our citizens, and we don't want things getting in the way of that. If you were to commit adultery, you could be discharged because that gets in the way of our performing our mission.

Now, we face an amendment here, which is opposed by all of our military leadership, which says we're going to repeal Don't Ask, Don't Tell.

What, then, does that look like?

I mean, currently the policy is you could be gay, and as long as it doesn't get in the way of doing your job, everything is fine.

So now we're going to repeal Don't Ask, Don't Tell. So what exactly are we asking?

Are we asking the military then to protect or condone homosexual behavior if it does get in the way of performing the mission?

What exactly are we talking about?

Are we talking about creating separate dormitories, for instance, if we have sexual harassment?

What will this have to do with recruitment? People that have a 17-year-old kid that may be wanting to sign up, what will this do to recruitment?

What's it going to do to the morale of the troops?

What's it going to do to small-unit cohesion?

And, also, the other piece of the military is about these soldiers that are giving their time and lives are confined to very tight areas and pushed together in very difficult circumstances over long periods of time. What is the effect of that?

And all of these questions are sitting out there, and the military leadership is saying, yeah, we don't know the answer to those questions. Give us some time to take a look at it. We don't want you to pass this until we can see what's going on with this.

Now, I have three sons. They've graduated Naval Academy. All of them went Marine Corps. One survived his experience in 2005 in Fallujah.

And when our sons and daughters are serving and laying their lives or their bodies on the line so that we can live in peace and freedom, that is a very sacred kind of sacrifice they're making for us. So why would we belittle that by jumping into something?

We're being asked to pass something that we don't even know what we're passing. We don't understand the implications or how it would look. And yet we're going to jump into this for, what, some sort of political deal to satisfy some vocal but small minority using the lives of our own children?

I will not have any part of betraying the interest of our kids just for political purposes.

Mr. SKELTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. DINGELL), my friend and colleague.

(Mr. DINGELL asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Chairman, I thank my good friend from Missouri for his kindness to me, for his support of this amendment, and for the yielding of this time.

This is an amendment which is to deal with a very important injustice done to marines by the Department of the Navy, and you may read more about it in my remarks as they are extended.

In a nutshell, people in the Marine Corps are being hurt, injured, poisoned, given cancer and other things by the way the Department of the Navy has run the posts and has provided contaminated water to the members of the Marine Corps and to their families. This will at least begin the process of getting information to these marines about what has happened and why it is that they are suffering this way, and see to it that we are taking a step forward to have the Marine Corps deliver some of the information that they're supposed to deliver under agreement.

I urge my colleagues to vote for the amendment, and I thank my friend from Missouri.

Mr. Chair, I rise today to urge my colleagues to support the amendment I have offered with my colleagues, Congressmen STUPAK and MILLER, pertaining to the historic water contamination at Marine Corps Base Camp Lejeune.

I would like to thank Chairman SKELTON for his willingness to work with me on this important issue.

Mr. Chair, I am offering this amendment on behalf of the marines and veterans that were exposed to the toxic drinking water at Camp Lejeune between 1957 and 1987 and whose lives have been forever changed because of it. There's Jerry Ensminger, whose daughter Janey was carried to term at Camp Lejeune and died at age 9 after a long and heart-wrenching battle with childhood leukemia. There's Jim Fontella and Mike Partain, two among the dozens of former Lejeune residents battling breast cancer, a disease rarely found among males. These are the poisoned patriots who have lent their stories and their voices to the others who have not spoken out. They want answers about the water contamination and our amendment will help provide them.

Put simply, our amendment would require the Department of the Navy to fulfill its obligation under an existing memorandum of understanding with the Department of Health and Human Services' Agency for Toxic Substances and Disease Registry—that is, to share all relevant environmental information pertaining to historic water contamination at Camp Lejeune. In addition, it requires the Navy to use its in-house experts to help ATSDR gather this information.

This amendment constitutes a small piece of a larger quest to get answers for our former marines and their families who were exposed to the highly toxic chemicals, TCE, PCE, and benzene. The fact is, 23 years after the contaminated wells were shut down, there is still much unknown. How much and to what extent were housing areas exposed to the contaminants? When did the contamination take place? What is the extent of the exposure to the specific chemicals? And finally, is there a link between the exposure to the toxic water and illnesses experienced by former Camp Lejeune residents? Our amendment will ensure that ATSDR—mandated by the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation and Liability Act to assess human health effects of exposures to toxic chemicals at Superfund sites—has the information it needs to complete its studies and answer these questions.

Mr. Chair, it is unfortunate we must require something as simple this by statute. But after 23 years, we have had enough delay from the Defense Department. Ironically, I first came to know about this problem when the Defense Department came before the Energy and Commerce Committee seeking broad exemptions from the Clean Air Act, the Solid Waste Disposal Act, and CERCLA, among others. The military wanted these exemptions in the name of readiness, public health be damned. To say the least, it is troubling to think about where ATSDR's studies would be or what terrible tragedies would await our servicemembers in the future if the Department of Defense were exempt from CERCLA.

In closing, I'd ask my colleagues to look at the bigger picture when considering this amendment. With Memorial Day approaching this weekend, what could be a more fitting tribute to our servicemembers and veterans than to uphold the sacred trust they place in our Government when they sign up to serve and potentially make the ultimate sacrifice for our Nation?

Mr. MCKEON. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself the balance of my time.

I have another letter to read, and I'd like to insert it into the RECORD.

This is from General Carl E. Mundy, Jr., United States Marine Corps, Retired. He sent an identical letter, I believe, to the chairman.

He says: "I write to convey my appreciation for your strong stance relative to efforts to repeal the current law which exclude homosexuals from serving openly in the armed services. You and I both know that such action is not in the best interest of our Nation or its Armed Forces. While each member of the HASC has many constituencies to serve, some very vocal, it may be that your largest is the 2.8 million men and women in uniform, together with the family members who support them and who number at least that many. In sharp contrast to homosexual activists, these volunteers in uniform serve silently and obediently and rely on the reasoned judgment of their leaders and even more so, perhaps, of those empowered to 'raise armies, provide and maintain a navy, and to make the rules for the governance thereof' to speak and to represent them.

"Secretary Gates has put into motion an effort to at least give this element of your constituents an opportunity to be heard relative to their concerns about implementation. The very large majority of servicemembers who are not homosexual, at least 97 percent or more, deserve to be heard before any peremptory, uninformed action is taken to impose the sexuality of a minority on them. I believe strongly that a moratorium on discharges being advocated by some in the Senate and on your committee as well could be tantamount to muzzling those most affected by such peremptory action. I appreciate the stand you have taken to prevent this.'

I would like to enter General Mundy's letter into the RECORD.

Mr. Chairman, there have been comments made that perhaps the Chiefs support this action that will be taking place tonight on this vote, tonight or tomorrow, whenever we get to that amendment. But I must reiterate, I spoke to them on the phone and they followed up with a letter and, to a person, they all oppose us taking action before the recommended procedure that the Secretary has set in place.

GENERAL CARL E. MUNDY, JR.,
UNITED STATES MARINE CORP (RET.),
May 19, 2010.

Hon. "BUCK" MCKEON,
Ranking Member, House Armed Services Committee,
Rayburn House Office Building,
Washington, DC.

DEAR CONGRESSMAN MCKEON: I write to convey my appreciation for your strong stance relative to efforts to repeal the current law which excludes homosexuals from serving openly in the Armed Services. You and I both know that such action is not in the best interests of our nation or its Armed Forces. While each member of the HASC has many constituencies to serve—some very vocal—it may be that your largest is the 2.8 million men and women in uniform together with the family members who support them and who number at least that many. In sharp contrast to homosexual activists, these volunteers in uniform serve silently and obediently and rely on the reasoned judgment of their leaders and even more so, perhaps, of those empowered to "... raise armies, provide and maintain a navy, and to make the rules for the governance thereof" to speak for and to represent them.

Secretary Gates has put into motion an effort to at least give this element of your constituents an opportunity to be heard relative to their concerns about implementation. The very large majority of servicemembers who are not homosexual—at least 97% or more—deserve to be heard before any peremptory, uninformed action is taken to impose the sexuality of a minority on them. I believe strongly that a moratorium on discharges being advocated by some in the Senate and on your Committee as well would be tantamount to muzzling those most affected by such peremptory action. I appreciate the stand you have taken to prevent this.

Last year, my Service, the Marine Corps, discharged something over 32,400 men and women from active service. Seventy-eight of those were discharged for matters related to homosexuality—less than one-quarter of one percent. Within that small number, more than half were still in Entry Level Training with less than a year in service—young trainees still in the reality-shock of Boot Camp or the immediate months following—who can barely be considered qualified, much less skilled or even of a maturity old enough to drink alcohol. And within that small number, three were discharged without any active service at all while still in the Delayed Entry Program awaiting assignment to active duty. Claims of a hemorrhage of skills due to the injustice of the law are simply not supported by cases like these. And in my experience, if not by admission of homosexuality—factual, or not at their still emerging state of maturity—most of these young people—homesick, disillusioned, or stunned by the shock of Recruit Training—would seek another means of gaining discharge.

As a final note, let me convey my concern that in counter-balance to whatever number of homosexual advocate voices you hear, the voices of the thousand retired military officers who gave their advice professionally and with dignity and respect to the President and members of Congress on this subject last year—together with the 160 more who have lent their names since—should not be ignored. This is the largest number of officers to have collectively conveyed their views and recommendations in the history of our nation. And in spite of the efforts of activists to impugn the character and legitimacy of these officers as out of touch, a number of those offering their advice commanded Divisions in combat or held other significant command or staff positions as recently as the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan. This body of professional advice matters, since the signers base our judgments on experience, and have no special interest agenda other than the effectiveness of our Armed Forces.

I want to again offer my admiration for your courageous and principled stand on behalf of the men and women of our armed services on this issue. I hold the strongest hope that you will continue to allow the voices of those in uniform to be heard on this important subject, and will continue to oppose efforts to impose a moratorium on discharges, which is tantamount to de-facto repeal of a law that has, and does serve the armed forces well.

Sincerely,

CARL E. MUNDY, JR.

Mr. SKELTON. Mr. Chairman, pursuant to section 4 of House Resolution 1404, I hereby give notice that amendment Nos. 68 and 81 may be offered out of order.

The Acting CHAIR. The gentleman's request is noted.

Mr. SKELTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. JACKSON LEE).

(Ms. JACKSON LEE of Texas asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. JACKSON LEE of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I rise today, as we debate the defense authorization bill, to discuss the concept of humanity because I believe the men and women of the United States military have a sense of compassion for humanity and courage, and the broadness of their humanity causes them to sacrifice on behalf of the American people. Today I stand here and thank them.

And then I want to acknowledge, as well, the vast civilian support staff that are found on the Nation's military bases and bases around the world. I got a good sense of that when I joined, sadly, my fellow colleagues at Ft. Hood a few months ago, mourning the loss of a civilian and soldiers at the hands of a terrorist. I was able to see civilians and soldiers coming together expressing concern for each other.

I saw the mourning of those families who had lost their fallen heroes, their soldiers. And, yes, I saw the civilian staff mourn, as well, over the losses that had occurred amongst their fellow workers and colleagues, soldiers, and a civilian, and those who were also injured.

As we mourned, it came to my attention that we must take care of all of them. Sergeant Kimberly Munley, who was a sergeant, a Fort Hood police sergeant to whom was attributed the success of bringing down this particular dangerous person, despite being shot herself; or a 19-year-old nutritionist who put a tourniquet on a wounded soldier and carried them out for medical care, even though she was also wounded.

So I am grateful that the committee has accepted my amendment, and I ask my colleagues to support the idea of more or continued post-traumatic stress disorder counseling for the civilians on this base, and to ensure that that happens, if ever such a tragedy occurs again, to be able to provide Airborne staff on military bases with that kind of support system. I have promised the Fort Hood community that I would return, and I intend to do so to check on how they're doing.

But it is important that we stand here today as we look toward Memorial Day, mourning those lost, to be able to say to those here that we will counsel or provide them with the services necessary to support those possibly suffering from post-traumatic stress disorder and other mental health issues due to work-related violence on our military installations.

I started out quickly, Mr. Chairman, by talking about humanity, and I finish by saying, I've heard all of the talk about Don't Ask, Don't Tell. It is interesting to note that the Secretary of Defense, the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs, as well as the President, recognize the importance of acknowledging this necessary change in our military.

But I am reminded of the history of integrating the military when President Truman said it was the right thing to do to provide the opportunity for Americans who happened to be of African American heritage to serve.

We know it is distinctive, but there is a reason for Don't Ask, Don't Tell to be eliminated, and it is that every decent human being needs the right to serve his or her country if they are willing to take the Oath of Service.

This is the right thing to do. Repeal it. It's time. The Murphy amendment is right and the process is in keeping with the respect of the opinion of those active duty soldiers who will be surveyed for their view. However now is the time to end this discrimination. My constituent Ensign Provost might have lived if his sexual orientation had not been misused to create an atmosphere that it was alright to take his life because he lived in fear of reprimand and dismissal. He was willing to serve his country but our country did not respect his humanity or his service.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of my amendment (#25) to H.R. 5136—"National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2011.”

My amendment would make available post-traumatic stress counseling for civilian victims of a shooting on a military installation base in the United States, including the shooting at Fort Hood.

Every branch of the United States Armed Forces has a civilian workforce. The civilian workforce, also called “civil service,” provides stability in various types of jobs at a military installation. That allows for the continuation of military operations in a peace or wartime environment. Civil service personnel serve in roles that provide an important support system allowing the Armed Services to operate at the highest levels.

There are many ways to serve our country without actually enlisting in the military. One of those ways is to work in a military civilian job with the Armed Services. There are many, many thousands of individuals serving in jobs in fields such as medicine, recreation, education, engineering, food services, and many other important areas in which civilians provide valuable support for our military operations. The Army alone employs more than 250,000 civilians on its bases and installations around the world.

Civilians, like soldiers, are sometimes placed in harm’s way and many work in challenging environments. One incident that recently presented unimaginable challenges and consequences for both soldiers and civilians was the shooting at Fort Hood. We understand that civilians stand in the same vulnerable shoes as soldiers when events like the Fort Hood event occur.

Enlisted personnel, National Guards, reservists and veterans with PTSD have lived through traumatic events that caused them to fear for their lives, bear witness to horrible things, and feel helpless and hopeless. PTSD symptoms usually start soon after the traumatic event, but they may not manifest until months or years later. If provided proper medical care, about half, 40 percent to 60 percent, of people who develop PTSD get better at some time.

Although veterans who served in combat are most frequently afflicted by PTSD, events such as the Fort Hood shooting highlight the physical and psychological dangers facing military personnel in all roles. Consequently, it is vital to extend to our civilian personnel the same benefits and support that we give to our active duty military. Civilians and military members on Fort Hood have equal responsibility to protect our Nation and, as such, it is morally imperative that we honor these civilians by providing them with equal support in the aftermath of such traumatic incidents.

Mr. Chairman, I urge my colleagues to support this simple but important amendment.

Mr. MILLER of North Carolina. Mr. Chair, for 30 years, the water that our former Marines and their families drank, cooked with, and bathed in at the Marine Corps Base Camp Lejeune was contaminated with highly toxic chemicals, including benzene, TCE, and PCE.

The Agency for Toxic Substances and Disease Registry, ATSDR, at the Centers for Disease Control is currently working on several health studies to determine just what effect this water had on the men and women serving at Lejeune.

For years the discussion about Camp Lejeune centered on TCE and PCE exposure, but recently the conversation turned to benzene. Benzene is a known carcinogen. This new emphasis on benzene has come about because new documents, recently discovered, show that marines’ exposure to benzene at Camp Lejeune was far greater than previously thought.

And these documents are not the only “newly found” documents.

ATSDR’s health studies must rely on having accurate data about what people were exposed to, as well as where and when these toxins were in the water. If you don’t get the water modeling right, you can’t do the rest of the studies. We are at a crucial point—we must get this right now.

In every memorandum of understanding between the Navy and ATSDR, the Navy was supposed to provide ATSDR with an inventory of all available data related to water contamination at Camp Lejeune; that inventory has never been provided.

Nobody disputes that the Navy has provided open access to their library and records to ATSDR, but access is not enough. The Navy is the expert on what documents they have and they must take responsibility for ensuring that all relevant documents are provided to ATSDR.

This amendment will ensure that no crucial documents will surface after these health studies have been completed.

Mr. STUPAK. Mr. Chair, I urge Members to support the Dingell/Stupak/Miller amendment to H.R. 5136, the Defense Authorization Act. I wish to thank my colleagues Congressmen DINGELL and MILLER for their work to bring this amendment to the floor.

As Chairman of the Energy and Commerce Committee’s Oversight and Investigations Subcommittee, I held a hearing in 2007 on the contaminated water wells at Camp Lejeune and how the Department of Defense did not appropriately respond to the discovery of volatile organic compounds within the drinking water from 1957 to 1987.

During the hearing, we listened to soldiers formerly stationed at Camp Lejeune who, along with members of their families who lived on the base, have encountered significant health problems they believe is tied to their exposure to TCE, PCE, benzene and other toxins.

These volatile organic compounds may be the cause of increased incidences of cancer and birth defects among women, children, employees, and soldiers stationed at Camp Lejeune.

Because Camp Lejeune is a Superfund site, the Agency for Toxic Substances and Disease Registry, ATSDR, is responsible for conducting health studies to determine the connections between the contaminated drinking water and incidences of cancer and birth defects.

Now, even after more than six years of data discovery efforts by ATSDR, a complete record of available data necessary for ATSDR’s health studies appears to remain incomplete.

This situation is unacceptable and I hope my colleagues will support our amendment to send a clear message that Congress expects this issue to be resolved expeditiously.

Our amendment requires the Navy to provide ATSDR with a complete inventory of all relevant data by putting in place additional personnel with experience and expertise in water modeling and environmental engineering who will work with ATSDR to bring this matter to a close.

This information sharing task is a shared goal between the agencies because it will ensure the scientific accuracy of the health studies ATSDR is tasked with completing.

I ask Members to support our amendment and send a clear signal on what we expect from Federal agencies in responding to our service men and women who have suffered from the Camp Lejeune legacy.

Mr. SKELTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

The Acting CHAIR. The question is on the amendments en bloc offered by the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. SKELTON).

The amendments en bloc were agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 21 OFFERED BY MR. GUTIERREZ

The Acting CHAIR. It is now in order to consider amendment No. 21 printed in House Report 111-498.

Mr. GUTIERREZ. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment at the desk.

The Acting CHAIR. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment No. 21 offered by Mr. GUTIERREZ:

At the end of title VIII, add the following new section:

SEC. 839. DEBARMENT OF BP AND ITS SUBSIDIARIES.

(a) CONTRACTS WITH BP AND ITS SUBSIDIARIES.—If the Secretary of Defense determines that BP or any of its subsidiaries performing any contract with the Department of Defense is no longer a responsible source (as defined in section 2302 of title 10, United States Code), the Secretary shall determine, not later than 90 days after making such determination, whether BP or its subsidiaries should be debarred from contracting with the Department of Defense.

(b) DEBAR.—In this section, the term “debar” has the meaning given that term by section 2393(c) of title 10, United States Code.

The Acting CHAIR. Pursuant to House Resolution 1404, the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. GUTIERREZ) and a Member opposed each will control 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. GUTIERREZ. Mr. Chairman, in 2009 the Occupational Safety and Health Administration fined BP $87 million for hundreds of safety violations at a Texas City refinery, many of which were originally identified after the 2005 explosion and then ignored there.

As recently as 2 months ago, BP was fined another $3 million for violations at the Toledo, Ohio, refinery similar to those identified in the 2005 Texas City refinery explosion. Again, just like in 2005, no steps were taken to correct the safety violations.

This blatant disregard for workers’ lives shows that BP is a bad partner for the U.S. Government.

I rise today to say that BP stands for too many broken promises, too many broken lives and too many broken laws.

My amendment is a simple, common-sense amendment that would require that the Secretary of Defense consider disbarring BP if it finds that BP is not a responsible source.

As a Federal contractor, BP must meet Federal acquisition regulation standards as a responsible source. What's the definition of a responsible source? It includes the provision that a prospective contractor must have "a satisfactory record of integrity and business ethics." As we've already defined, they do not uphold that standard.

As well, they must have a satisfactory performance record. To take that definition from the Webster's dictionary, integrity is "firm adherence to a code or standard of values." BP clearly does not meet the standard set by even the lowest code of values.

The history that I've talked about cannot be ignored. In March of 2005, before the recent explosion, at a BP Texas refinery, 15 people lost their lives; 180 were injured. Investigators from the U.S. Chemical Safety and Hazard Protection Board believed this explosion could have been avoided had it not been for organizational and safety deficiencies at all levels of BP Corporation.

And when they polluted in Alaska, the EPA and every government official encouraged the U.S. Attorney to indict them criminally for their abuse of safety standards.

Now, let me just say, this comes straight, straight from BP's code of conduct. BP code of conduct. It's right here. I've got it right down from the Internet, and here's what it says.

□ 1815

Our code of conduct is the cornerstone of our commitment to integrity. Integrity?

An important consideration is how BP addresses integrity. Quote—this comes from right here. It says, "code of conduct is the cornerstone of our commitment to integrity." Moreover, within their code of conduct, BP states that they are "committed to providing all BP employees . . . with a safe and secure work environment where no one is subject to unnecessary risk."

You know what it further says here right from their manual and code of conduct? It says right here on page 72, it says right here, Make sure you know what to do if an emergency occurs at your place of work.

Right from their BP manual and code of conduct. Clearly, they are not meeting their code of conduct.

But it gets worse. This comes from this very manual, which I am going to add to the RECORD. Quote, "We aim for no accidents, no harm to people, and no damage to the environment."

Zero for three. I didn't make this up. It's in their code of conduct.

And if we are supposed to be responsible and make sure that contractors—$2 billion we buy from BP every year. I say we buy not $1 more of their oil.

They have been irresponsible, and they don't even meet their own code of conduct that comes down from their own Web site.

Mr. Chair, I think we have an obligation, a responsibility to the American taxpayers to respond. And what does my simple amendment say? It says the Secretary of Defense should consider disbarring them if he finds they don't meet the code of conduct which should be administered to every provider of goods to the American people on which we spend the American taxpayers' dollars.

OUR COMMITMENT TO INTEGRITY
HEALTH, SAFETY AND SECURITY

BP is committed to providing all Bp employees—and those of other companies working on our premises—with a safe and secure work environment where no one is subject to unnecessary risk.

We recognize that safe operations depend not only on technically sound plant and equipment, but also on competent people and an active HSSE culture. No activity is so important that it cannot be done safely.

Simply obeying safety rules is not enough. BP's commitment to safety means each of us needs to be alert to safety risks as we go about our jobs.

BASIC RULES YOU MUST FOLLOW ALWAYS

Comply with the requirements of the HSSE management system at your work location—including the use of relevant standards, instructions and processes—and with the golden rules of safety.

Stop any work that becomes unsafe.

Only undertake work for which you are trained, competent, medically fit and sufficiently rested and alert to carry out.

Make sure you know what to do if an emergency occurs at your place of work.

Help ensure that those who work with you—employees, contractors and other third parties—act consistently with BP's HSSE commitments.

Promptly report to local BP management any accident, injury, illness, unsafe or unhealthy condition, incident, spill or release of material to the environment, so that steps can be taken to correct, prevent or control those conditions immediately. Never assume that someone else will report a risk or concern.

Seek advice and help if: You are ever unclear about your HSSE obligations; You have a concern about a potential or actual breach of HSSE law or a BP HSSE requirement.

NEVER

Undertake work when your performance is impaired by alcohol or other drugs, legal or illegal, prescribed or otherwise.

Possess, use or transfer illegal drugs or other substances on company premises.

Use threats, intimidation or other violence at work, or bring weapons—including those carried for sporting purposes—onto company premises.

I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. McKEON. Mr. Chairman, I rise to seek the time in opposition although I am not opposed to the amendment.

The Acting CHAIR. Without objection, the gentleman from California is recognized for 5 minutes.

There was no objection.

Mr. McKEON. I would just like to make a couple of points.

The Secretary would first have to determine that BP was not a responsible source. If the Secretary determines that BP was not a responsible source, the Secretary would already be authorized to consider debarment. The Secretary is not obligated to debar BP or any of its subsidiaries in any circumstance.

Having said that, I yield back the balance of my time.

The Acting CHAIR. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. GUTIERREZ).

The question was taken; and the Acting Chair announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. GUTIERREZ. Mr. Chair, I demand a recorded vote.

The Acting CHAIR. Pursuant to clause 6 of rule XVIII, further proceedings on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois will be postponed.

AMENDMENT NO. 42 OFFERED BY MS. ESHOO

The Acting CHAIR. It is now in order to consider amendment No. 42 printed in House Report 111-498.

Ms. ESHOO. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment at the desk.

The Acting CHAIR. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment No. 42 offered by Mr. ESHOO:

At the end of subtitle C of title IX, add the following new section:

SEC. 923. AUDITS OF INTELLIGENCE COMMUNITY BY GOVERNMENT ACCOUNTABILITY OFFICE.

(a) AUDITS.—Title V of the National Security Act of 1947 (50 U.S.C. 413 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"AUDITS OF INTELLIGENCE COMMUNITY BY GOVERNMENT ACCOUNTABILITY OFFICE

"SEC. 508. (a) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in subsection (b), the Director of National Intelligence shall ensure that personnel of the Government Accountability Office designated by the Comptroller General are provided with access to all information in the possession of an element of the intelligence community that the Comptroller General determines is necessary for such personnel to conduct an analysis, evaluation, or investigation of a program or activity of an element of the intelligence community that is requested by one of the congressional intelligence committees.

"(b) AUDITS OF PROGRAMS INVOLVING SOURCES AND METHODS.—(1) If the Director of National Intelligence determines that a portion of an analysis, evaluation, or investigation to be conducted by the Comptroller General that is requested by a committee of Congress with jurisdiction over the subject of such analysis, evaluation, or investigation involves a matter that is subject to the reporting requirements of section 503 or intelligence sources or methods, such portion may be redacted from such analysis, evaluation, or investigation and provided exclusively to the congressional intelligence committees.

"(2) If the Director of National Intelligence redacts a portion of an analysis, evaluation, or investigation under paragraph (1), the Director shall inform the committee of Congress that requested such analysis, evaluation, or investigation of the redaction.

“(c) NOTICE OF ANALYSIS, EVALUATION, OR INVESTIGATION AND PROCEDURES.—Not later than 15 days before initiating an analysis, evaluation, or investigation of an element of the intelligence community, the Comptroller General shall submit to the congressional intelligence committees a notice that includes—

“(e) CONFIDENTIALITY.—The Comptroller General shall maintain the same level of confidentiality for a record made available during the course of an analysis, evaluation, or investigation involving sources or methods as is required of the head of the element of the intelligence community from which such record is obtained. An officer or employee of the Government Accountability Office shall be subject to the same statutory penalties for unauthorized disclosure or use of a record as an officer or employee of the element of the intelligence community that provided the Comptroller General or such officer or employee of the Government Accountability Office with access to such record.

“(f) WORKPAPERS.—All workpapers of the Comptroller General and all records and property of any element of the intelligence community that the Comptroller General uses during the course of an analysis, evaluation, or investigation involving sources or methods shall remain in facilities provided by the element of the intelligence community providing such records and property.

“(g) PROVISION OF SUPPLIES.—The head of each element of the intelligence community that is a subject of an analysis, evaluation, or investigation by the Comptroller General involving sources or methods shall provide the Comptroller General with suitable and secure offices and furniture, telephones, and access to copying facilities, for purposes of such analysis, evaluation, or investigation.

“(j) COOPERATION.—The head of each element of the intelligence community that is a subject of an analysis, evaluation, or investigation shall cooperate fully with the Comptroller General and provide timely responses to requests by the Comptroller General for documentation and information made pursuant to this section.

“(k) RULE OF CONSTRUCTION.—Except as provided in subsection (b), nothing in this section or any other provision of law shall be construed to restrict or limit the authority of the Comptroller General to audit, evaluate, or obtain access to the records of an element of the intelligence community absent specific statutory language restricting or limiting such audits, evaluations, or access to records.”

The Acting CHAIR. Pursuant to House Resolution 1404, the gentlewoman from California (Ms. ESHOO) and a Member opposed each will control 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentlewoman from California.

Ms. ESHOO. Mr. Chairman, I rise to offer my amendment No. 42 to this National Defense Authorization Act.

Mr. Chairman, what brings me to the floor is something that I think should concern every single Member of the House. We all know that our number one obligation as Members of Congress is to secure our country. And as a member of the House Intelligence Committee, it matters not Republican or Democrat, we stand shoulder to shoulder. We may debate different things. We all know, and the full House knows, that this is our first and top obligation. In order to carry that obligation out, that duty done well, as a member of the House Intelligence Committee we must do effective oversight. We have to do investigations. It is the way we do our work.

The reason I offer this amendment is because, unlike all the rest of the committees of the House who can use the GAO, dispatch the Government Accountability Office into the executive branch to make the kinds of determinations on financial issues, financial management, personnel, acquisitions, information technology, whatever it might be, the House Intelligence Committee is not allowed to do that. And in attempting to do it, it has drawn the ire of the administration.

Now, I am a Democrat. We have a Democratic administration. I think the administration is ill-advised in this. These are the prerogatives of the Congress and the jurisdictions of our committees. I think that we need to be able to have the tools that the GAO has, with all of the safeguards in place relative to sources and methods and those things that are the most sensitive in the intelligence community. But I don't believe that the executive branch should be telling the legislative branch what tools we should have and to make that decision for us. That speaks to the separation of powers, and it also speaks to what we, as Members of Congress, in terms of our duty have to carry out and to do.

So my amendment really corrects this flaw, and I think it's an important provision that would restore the GAO's role in congressional oversight. I don't think this is a question of whether the information is too sensitive for the GAO. They have the security clearances. They have dealt with things before, and nothing has ever happened.

So as I said, I believe this issue goes directly to the heart of one of the most important functions of the Congress, and that is effective oversight. That's what this amendment is about.

I want to thank, in particular, Chairman HOWARD BERMAN for his work on this issue from the House Foreign Affairs Committee, and also my colleagues from the House Intelligence Committee who are sponsoring this amendment: Congressman HOLT, Congressman TIERNEY of Massachusetts, Congressman THOMPSON of California, and Congresswoman SCHAKOWSKY of Illinois.

I rise to offer my amendment #42, to the FY2011 National Defense Authorization Act. This Amendment would require the Director of National Intelligence to cooperate with GAO inquiries initiated by committees of jurisdiction.

Oversight of matters in the intelligence community—including financial management, personnel systems, acquisitions, and information technology—is a fundamental prerogative of Congress. GAO plays a critical role helping committees examine the functions of government agencies in an objective, thorough manner.

But despite this expertise, the intelligence community refuses to allow GAO in the door, even when the intelligence committees—the committees that have jurisdiction over them—have asked them to investigate. The Administration has even threatened to veto the Intelligence Authorization Bill because it contained a provision that would restore GAO's role in Congressional oversight.

The co-sponsors of this amendment have joined me in rejecting the Administration's flawed legal analysis that would exempt the intelligence community from GAO's review—even though they review every other federal agency.

This is not a question of whether the information is too sensitive for GAO. GAO has evaluated a number of national security programs, including ones that have sensitive intelligence implications like Intelligence Surveillance and Reconnaissance programs which are known as ISR platforms. GAO has issued classified reports on the Iraq war and parts of the Comprehensive National Cybersecurity Initiative. Their personnel have the appropriate security clearances and they know how to safeguard sensitive information.

In an abundance of caution, the amendment lays out additional safeguards that GAO must follow to be able to have access to our nation's intelligence information.

I believe this issue is one that goes directly to the heart of one of the most important functions of the Congress, and that is oversight. This also goes to the very core of the principle of Separation of Powers.

My amendment would make clear to the intelligence community that they cannot bar the door to Congressional oversight, and it is Congress, not the Executive branch that determines which tools we get to use.

In particular, I'd like to thank Chairman BERMAN of the House Foreign Affairs Committee and HPSCI members Representatives HOLT, TIERNEY, THOMPSON of California, and SCHAKOWSKY for co-sponsoring this amendment. I urge the adoption of the amendment.

At this point I would like to yield to Mr. BERMAN, my trusted and distinguished colleague from California.

The Acting CHAIR. The gentleman is recognized for the 1½ minutes remaining in favor of the amendment.

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Chairman, the Eshoo amendment cuts right to the heart of our constitutional authority: Congressional oversight of matters, in this case, within the intelligence community—basic functions, financial management, acquisitions, information technology—a fundamental prerogative of this body, a prerogative that should not be limited to the intelligence committees.

Bottom line, GAO plays a critical role in helping the committees examine day-to-day functions of government agencies within their jurisdiction, and its expertise needs to be brought to bear on the intelligence community. This is particularly true after the 2004 reforms that established the ODNI. There is no community that has undergone more bureaucratic overhaul and tumult, any agency within the Federal Government, than within the intelligence community.

The notion that committees of appropriate jurisdiction are blocked from investigating areas within their domain for oversight purposes, having nothing to do—we clearly exempt the sources and methods issues from this oversight—makes no sense. It is an insult to the prerogatives of the Congress. And to the extent that the administration argues this should be solely within their prerogative, they don't fully understand our institutional role in Congress.

I don't understand how anyone in this body who is interested in dealing with waste, with fraud, with duplication would want to limit the GAO's authority to go into appropriate areas within the intelligence community.

I urge an "aye" vote.

□ 1830

Mr. THORNBERRY. Mr. Chairman, I seek the time in opposition.

The Acting CHAIR. The gentleman from Texas is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. THORNBERRY. Mr. Chairman, I think the first and probably most important point to make on this amendment is that it does not belong on this bill and it imperils the whole bill.

This issue about whether to expand GAO's authority to be able to investigate the intelligence community, which has been an issue in the fiscal year 2010 intelligence authorization bill, has been the subject of veto threats from the administration and is one of, if not the reason, here 4 months before the end of the fiscal year we still do not have an intelligence authorization bill.

So it does not belong here. This is the DOD authorization bill. It is being discussed in another forum where it should, the intelligence authorization bill, and if it gets added to the DOD authorization bill, it puts in danger this entire bill because just today, the administration sent another email which confirmed the veto threat over this provision.

So however Members feel about the particular issue one way or another, I would suggest that you ought to be very careful about endangering the whole bill over this provision.

Second point I'd make is this is not a change to be taken lightly. As the gentlelady, my colleague on the Intelligence Committee mentioned, the GAO has not had this power, authority before since the modern intelligence community has existed. Congress after Congress of both parties, President after President of both parties have rejected this, I would suggest, for some very good reasons.

So this is not a step to be taken lightly.

I think the only argument one can make is that the current intelligence committees are incapable of performing their oversight responsibilities and therefore they have to get this other entity, GAO, in to help them do that. I don't agree with that position. I think the intelligence committees in the House and the Senate are capable of performing their job. Now, I get frustrated. I don't agree with everything that the majority chooses to do, but I believe that the committee is perfectly capable of oversight of the intelligence community as we were tasked to do in the House rules and by statute.

These committees were created in the 1970s to fill a very unique role, and to undermine them by saying they are incapable of performing their job which, without bringing GAO and investigators and so forth, I think is a mistake.

I also believe, Mr. Chairman, that this amendment may undermine the role of the DNI at a time that is very sensitive for the role of the DNI. Because if you look at the amendment itself, it says the Comptroller General decides what he needs access to, has control over how these investigations will be conducted. Now, the amendment says that you can have discussions with the DNI, but the decision is with the Comptroller General, further undermining the DNI's control over classified material. I think that's a mistake.

There are other flaws, in my view, in this amendment. But the bottom line is it undermines the bill. It does not belong here. And it is a step that previous Congresses, previous Presidents have not chosen to take because of the sensitivity of the material and the unique role that the select committees on intelligence play.

Therefore, I hope my colleagues on both sides of the aisle will reject this amendment. I urge them to do so.

I yield back the balance of my time.

The Acting CHAIR. All time for debate on the amendment has expired.

Mr. ANDREWS. Is it in order to propound a unanimous consent request at this point?

The Acting CHAIR. Any request to extend time must be congruent on both sides.

Mr. ANDREWS. I would make a unanimous consent request to extend for each side 1 minute.

The Acting CHAIR. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

Mr. ANDREWS. I would yield 1 minute to the Speaker of the House, the gentlewoman from California (Ms. PELOSI).

Ms. PELOSI. I thank the gentleman for yielding and his leadership on this important bill before us.

I commend Congresswoman ESHOO for her attention to this important matter, her leadership in bringing this amendment to the floor.

Mr. Chairman, as you all know, protecting American people is our first responsibility. Their security is what we take an oath to uphold, protect, and defend. In order to do that, we recognize the importance of intelligence gathering to preventing violence and to protecting the American people, especially in this age when we're fighting terrorism at home and abroad.

The issue before us is if the responsibilities of Congress can be honored without the knowledge that we are entitled to. This is a very important issue. We all recognize, as the gentleman said, the importance of having information be kept secret when it's in our national security interest to do so. Not to overdo that to the extent of having Congress not have the information it needs to do its job of proper oversight to protect the American people.

We are preventing harm. And if we're going to prevent harm, we have to have information to do so. And the members of the Intelligence Committee have a responsibility to hold that information close. This doesn't apply to every piece of information of intelligence that comes to the committee, but it does say that the GAO has a proven track record of conducting thorough and professional investigations. Their work has informed the Congress and led to significant changes that have enhanced our government's effectiveness. GAO staff are professionals who protect information held by the intelligence community. A vote for this amendment is a vote for enhancing intelligence oversight. It is a vote for Congress.

I urge our colleagues to support the Eshoo amendment.

Mr. THORNBERRY. Mr. Chairman, I certainly agree with the distinguished Speaker about the importance of our role in national security and the importance of Congress' role in overseeing the intelligence community. I agree that national security is the first job of the Federal Government.

I also agree with both the gentleladies from California that oversight can be improved from the Congress. As a matter of fact, I've had legislation, which has not been allowed to be voted on the floor, to make clear the notification requirements and statute about what any administration must notify Congress about, the information it must give us.

I'd also have to point out that the 9/11 Commission made a number of very important recommendations on how we can improve oversight in this Congress. Unfortunately, that have not been adopted. Now, they adopted a kind of a hybrid panel of the Appropriations Committee, but that was not at all what the 9/11 Commission, the WMD Commission recommend we do to improve oversight.

I think we should focus on making our committees of oversight more effective rather than bringing in this other entity, the General Accounting Office, that has historically never had a role with the intelligence community, and that the President says he will veto the bill over if we allow it to happen.

Let's look at ourselves, improve ourselves first before we start bringing in others.

Mr. TOWNS. Mr. Chair, as Chairman of the Oversight and Government Reform Committee, I support the amendment offered by Ms. ESHOO because it will strengthen government accountability and enhance critical oversight of the intelligence community. The amendment provides necessary clarification regarding the authority of the General Accountability Office, GAO, to receive information from the intelligence community. Congress relies on the GAO as a force multiplier in carrying out the investigative and oversight functions vested in the Legislative Branch. The GAO helps inform the Congress and all Executive agencies about areas and programs within the federal government that are performing well, and those that need to be improved or are vulnerable to waste, fraud, and abuse.

This amendment will allow GAO to carry out these vital functions without unwarranted interference from intelligence community agencies. As Acting Comptroller General Gene Dodaro previously noted, this authority does not represent an overhaul of existing oversight mechanisms for the intelligence community. Instead, "The proposed legislative provisions in essence reaffirm GAO's existing authority in order to address the lack of cooperation GAO has received from certain elements of the IC [intelligence community] in carrying out work at the specific request of the intelligence committees, and other committees of jurisdiction as defined by the rules of the Senate and House." The intelligence community will function more effectively, and better protect the security of this country if this amendment is adopted.

Despite my strong support for the amendment and its important goals, I should note my concern with the way in which the amendment is drafted. This provision should clearly identify the authority of any committee of Congress with jurisdiction over the identified subject to request evaluation or analysis of an intelligence community component, not only the congressional intelligence committees, except in the case of matters concerning intelligence sources and methods.

I thank Ms. ESHOO and the other sponsors of this important amendment for bringing it before the House, and I urge all Members to support it.

Mr. THORNBERRY. I yield back the balance of my time.

The Acting CHAIR. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentlewoman from California (Ms. ESHOO).

The question was taken; and the Acting Chair announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. THORNBERRY. Mr. Chair, I demand a recorded vote.

The Acting CHAIR. Pursuant to clause 6 of rule XVIII, further proceedings on the amendment offered by the gentlewoman from California will be postponed.

AMENDMENT NO. 47 OFFERED BY MR. SARBANES

The Acting CHAIR. It is now in order to consider amendment No. 47 printed in House Report 111-498.

The Acting CHAIR. Pursuant to House resolution 1404, the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. SARBANES) and a Member opposed each will control 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Maryland.

Mr. SARBANES. Thank you, Mr. Chair.

This amendment, amendment number 47, I believe, in the queue, would bring standards of good government and good government practice to procurement across the Federal agencies. What it does, in fact, is it takes a set of standards that has been put in place already with respect to the Department of Defense as a result of the DOD authorization bill of 2008, as well as standards that were built into appropriations bills applying to other agencies over the last couple of years, and it makes it clear that those are going to be authorized standards going forward to apply to non-DOD agencies as well now as to DOD agencies.

As many people know, over the last few years, the impulse to contract services out on the part of the Federal Government went too far. And in fact, studies have demonstrated that, for example, the Department of Defense's service contractor workforce grew from 732,000 in 2000 to 1.3 million in 2006, a huge increase. And this kind of phenomenon was not limited to the Department of Defense. We saw it in other agencies—the Department of Homeland Security and other places across the Federal workforce.

Secretary Gates, recognizing that things have gone too far in this direction, is looking for a better balance and has already declared that DOD will examine this reliance on contractors and begin to bring more of a balance back into the equation. So what this amendment would do is take that same approach, those same standards and apply them across the board to non-DOD agencies.

It includes a number of provisions. Very briefly, I will go over those.

The first is it would close a loophole that allowed certain work performed by Federal employees to be contracted out without determining whether in fact that would result in any savings. Well, that's the kind of analysis that needs to be done. And so we would close that loophole.

It would create a contractor inventory. Right now we don't really have a sense of which contracts are out there, what kind of outsourcing has been done. We need to get a handle on that, have an inventory, so we can make better decisions and informed judgements going forward.

It would also seek to bring some analysis as to when it's appropriate to bring back in-house some of these functions and operations that have been outsourced according to very reasonable and rational standards.

And the last thing it would do is improve oversight and transparency. It would prevent any agency from establishing arbitrary quotas or targets or numerical goals with respect to what should be outsourced or not. In other words, what this seeks to do is bring a rational analysis back to whether something should be outsourced or not outsourced. It doesn't try to tilt the presumption in one direction or another. It just says let's look at this on a careful basis and determine when it makes sense, when it can generate savings, when it's a good thing for the Federal Government to do, and when it may not be such a good thing to do.

So I urge support of this amendment because I do believe it will bring commonsense good government provisions back into the mix and will make those permanent for all government agencies across the board.

I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. LAMBORN. Mr. Chair, I seek time in opposition.

The Acting CHAIR. The gentleman from Colorado is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. LAMBORN. At this time I'd like to yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from California (Mr. ISSA).

Mr. ISSA. Mr. SARBANES, I am sure, is well-intended with this amendment. But I hope the Chair will take note that this amendment is wholly outside the jurisdiction of this committee. And for that reason, it would be subject to a rule, if the rule allowed it.

More importantly, it is very clear that although well-intended, it falls short of its intended mark. Mr. SARBANES in his comments, rightfully so, said he wanted to establish standards. But I am sure the gentleman wants to establish a standard.

This amendment would establish every agency having a different standard. We already have the Office of Management and Budget and other agencies working to define inherently governmental in a uniform way, and that is critical. We do not want to bring in anything which is less expensive to do out-of-house and is not necessary to bring in-house.

I share with the gentleman the desire to make sure that which must be done by the government, that which is so special that we definitely do not want profit fitting into the equation, we want it done by the government.

I never again want to consider anything being outsourced simply because we don't have the will to build the resources in-house, particularly when it often can cost more, not less, to outsource.

So I would hope that the gentleman would withdraw his amendment, one, because it's outside the jurisdiction of this committee; and, two, because there is a time and a place to get a standard. We already have an effort under way by this administration to establish a single standard, one that could be uniformly executed that would save money and save confusion.

Mr. SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, may I inquire how much time is remaining?

The Acting CHAIR. The gentleman from Maryland has 1 minute remaining.

Mr. SARBANES. I yield 45 seconds to the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. LYNCH).

Mr. LYNCH. I thank the gentleman for yielding. I rise in support of the amendment offered by my friend and colleague, Mr. SARBANES of Maryland.

This amendment ensures due diligence on the part of Federal agencies by requiring cost comparisons before any work can be awarded to contractors at non-Department of Defense agencies.

I just want to point out that this is what DOD is doing now, and those of us on the Oversight Committee, who saw the problems that were created by recklessly contracting out core government responsibilities in the Iraq reconstruction era, think this is a great idea. We think that this is an idea that will make sure that we do effective cost analysis and also measure the appropriateness of whether or not a core government's function should be contracted out to begin with.

Mr. LAMBORN. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

The trouble is, this is not working so great for the Department of Defense, and to take it to all the other departments of government is not a good idea.

We were promised that we would have a cost analysis that the validity of analysis and cost models would be provided, and that really hasn't been provided. So we have these glowing claims that this is going to save money, but we haven't seen the analysis backing that up.

What we do know is that there will be people in the private sector losing their jobs. Now, sure, it will get transferred to the government service, but are we comparing apples to apples or apples to oranges?

The claims that this will save money, I am not sure they take into account such things as health care coverage and pensions and things like that that a Federal employee would receive on top of their salary.

I also question the long-term strategic use, especially in the Defense Department, of the great amounts of insourcing that are being talked about, because the most innovation that we get comes historically from the private sector.

People that are in government are well-intentioned, they do their best, but there just sometimes is not that same cutting-edge innovation and technology improvement in government service that we see with people working in the private sector.

The competition is so intense, that can drive innovation in the private sector. So to give that up for core competencies, core things that should be done by the private sector is something that I see as not good for the long-term strategy of the defense industry.

For that reason, too, I really have to question this impulse to take something that's really not working that great and apply it to all of government just because you know of a few examples where maybe a contractor was paid too much.

I agree with Representative ISSA. We need to first of all step back and see if this is even working in the Department of Defense. And to assume that it is, on very skimpy or scant evidence, and apply it to the entire government is just way too premature and hasty. I would urge a "no" vote on this amendment.

I know it's well-intentioned, but I would urge strongly everyone to oppose it.

I yield back the balance of my time. Mr. SARBANES. I yield the balance of my time to my colleague from New Jersey (Mr. ANDREWS).

The Acting CHAIR. The gentleman is recognized for 15 seconds.

Mr. ANDREWS. The committee supports this amendment because we support Mr. SARBANES' approach of merit-driven decision-making. The OMB will oversee this process. We believe it will improve quality and protect the taxpayers. We support the amendment.

The Acting CHAIR. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. SARBANES).

The question was taken; and the Acting Chair announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. ISSA. Mr. Chair, I demand a recorded vote.

The Acting CHAIR. Pursuant to clause 6 of rule XVIII, further proceedings on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Maryland will be postponed.

(b) RECOGNITION OF THE LOYALTY OF THE RESIDENTS OF GUAM.—The United States forever will be grateful to the residents of Guam for their steadfast loyalty to the United States of America, as demonstrated by the countless acts of courage they performed despite the threat of death or great bodily harm they faced at the hands of the Imperial Japanese military forces that occupied Guam during World War II.

(2) COMPENSABLE GUAM VICTIM.—The term "compensable Guam victim" means an individual determined under section 1704(a)(1) to have suffered, as a result of the attack and occupation of Guam by Imperial Japanese military forces during World War II, or incident to the liberation of Guam by United States military forces, any of the following: (A) Rape or severe personal injury (such as loss of a limb, dismemberment, or paralysis).

(B) Forced labor or a personal injury not under subparagraph (A) (such as disfigurement, scarring, or burns).

(C) Forced march, internment, or hiding to evade internment.

(3) DEFINITIONS OF SEVERE PERSONAL INJURIES AND PERSONAL INJURIES.—The Foreign Claims Settlement Commission shall promulgate regulations to specify injuries that constitute a severe personal injury or a personal injury for purposes of subparagraphs (A) and (B), respectively, of paragraph (2).

(b) CLAIMS SUBMITTED FOR PAYMENTS.—

(1) SUBMITTAL OF CLAIM.—For purposes of subsection (a)(1) and subject to paragraph (2), the Foreign Claims Settlement Commission may not determine an individual is eligible for a payment under section 1703 unless the individual submits to the Commission a claim in such manner and form and containing such information as the Commission specifies.

(2) FILING PERIOD FOR CLAIMS AND NOTICE.—All claims for a payment under section 1703 shall be filed within one year after the Foreign Claims Settlement Commission publishes public notice of the filing period in the Federal Register. The Foreign Claims Settlement Commission shall provide for the notice required under the previous sentence not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this title. Any agreement to the contrary shall be unlawful and void. Whoever demands or receives, on account of services so rendered, any remuneration in excess of the maximum permitted by this section shall be fined not more than $5,000 or imprisoned not more than 12 months, or both.

(7) APPEALS AND FINALITY.—Objections and appeals of decisions of the Foreign Claims Settlement Commission shall be to the Commission, and upon rehearing, the decision in each claim shall be final, and not subject to further review by any court or agency.

(8) CERTIFICATIONS FOR PAYMENT.—After a decision approving a claim becomes final, the chairman of the Foreign Claims Settlement Commission shall certify it to the Secretary of the Treasury for authorization of a payment under section 1703.

(9) TREATMENT OF AFFIDAVITS.—For purposes of section 1703 and subject to paragraph (2), the Foreign Claims Settlement Commission shall treat a claim that is accompanied by an affidavit of an individual that attests to all of the material facts required for establishing eligibility of such individual for payment under such section as establishing a prima facie case of the individual's eligibility for such payment without the need for further documentation, except as the Commission may otherwise require. Such material facts shall include, with respect to a claim under paragraph (2) or (3) of section 1703(a), a detailed description of the injury or other circumstance supporting the claim involved, including the level of payment sought.

(10) RELEASE OF RELATED CLAIMS.—Acceptance of payment under section 1703 by an individual for a claim related to a compensable Guam decedent or a compensable Guam victim shall be in full satisfaction of all claims related to such decedent or victim, respectively, arising under the Guam Meritorious Claims Act of 1945 (Public Law 79-224), the implementing regulations issued by the United States Navy pursuant thereto, or this title.

AMENDMENT NO. 6 OFFERED BY MR. COFFMAN OF COLORADO

The text of the amendment is as follows:

At the end of title VIII, add the following new section:

SEC. 839. DEFENSE INDUSTRIAL BASE PRIORITY FOR RARE EARTH NEODYMIUM IRON BORON MAGNETS.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds the following:

(1) There is an urgent need to restore the United States capability to manufacture sintered neodymium iron boron magnets for use in defense applications and there is an urgent need to eliminate the domestic supply-chain vulnerability related to these key materials in the defense supply-chain.

(2) An April 14, 2010 report by the Government Accountability Office entitled "Rare Earth Materials in the Defense Supply Chain" demonstrates—

(A) the "United States is not currently producing neodymium iron boron magnets," a key rare earth material;

(B) that future availability of neodymium is largely controlled by Chinese suppliers;

(C) that alternatives to rare earth materials could reduce the demand and dependence on rare earth materials in 10 to 15 years, but these materials might not meet current application requirements;

(D) where rare earth materials are used in defense systems, the materials are responsible for the functionality of the component and would be difficult to replace without losing performance;

(E) fin actuators used in precision-guided munitions are specifically designed around the capabilities of neodymium iron boron rare earth magnets, which are primarily available from Chinese suppliers;

(F) the DDG-51 Hybrid Electric Drive Ship Program uses permanent-magnet motors using neodymium magnets from China; and

(G) future generations of some defense system components, such as transmit and receive modules for radars, will continue to depend on rare earth materials.

(3) The United States has the technological capability to restore its neodymium iron boron manufacturing capability.

(4) Worldwide supplies of rare earth materials, including neodymium, are expected to tighten significantly within the next 3-5 years.

(5) A domestic effort to restore domestic sintered neodymium iron boron magnet manufacturing capability, including efforts to qualify those magnets for use in defense applications, will take between 3-5 years and should begin immediately to avoid future weapon system delivery disruption.

(b) REQUIREMENT.—Not later than 90 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall submit to the Committees on Armed Services of the House of Representatives and the Senate a plan to establish a domestic source of sintered neodymium iron boron magnets for use in the defense supply chain.

(c) SINTERED NEODYMIUM IRON BORON MAGNETS.—For the purposes of subsection (b), the capability to manufacture sintered neodymium iron boron magnets includes the alloying, pressing, and sintering of magnet materials. It does not include manufacturing magnets from standard shapes or imported blocks of neodymium. The Secretary's plan shall not allow the grinding or reprocessing of neodymium to be considered a "domestic source of sintered neodymium iron boron magnets".

(2) recommendations for prohibiting the Department of Defense, the Department of State, or the United States Agency for International Development from entering into contracts with contractors engaged in activities relating to Afghanistan that have a record of engaging in waste, fraud, or abuse.

The Acting CHAIR. Pursuant to House Resolution 1404, the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. ANDREWS) and the gentleman from California (Mr. MCKEON) each will control 10 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from New Jersey.

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Chairman, again, this is an example of Members from both sides of the aisle making well thought out, constructive contributions on a whole range of issues that we think improve the bill. Both the majority and minority have examined each of the provisions in the en bloc amendment. We support each of them. I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. MCKEON. Mr. Chairman, I claim the time in opposition, although I don't oppose the amendment.

The Acting CHAIR. Without objection, the gentleman from California is recognized for 5 minutes.

There was no objection.

Mr. MCKEON. At this time I would like to yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Colorado (Mr. COFFMAN).

Mr. COFFMAN of Colorado. Mr. Chairman, the Department of Defense is facing a near-term shortage of key “rare earth” materials necessary to support our defense weapon systems, and rare Earth magnets are especially critical. Over 97 percent of rare earth production is controlled by China.

Currently the United States does not have a manufacturer of neodymium-iron-boron rare Earth magnets, yet they are found in our precision guided munitions, ships, aircraft, and other critical weapons systems.

One key finding of the recent Government Accountability Office report on rare earth materials in the defense supply chain was that the Chinese-sourced “neo” magnets are being included in weapons platforms delivered to the Department of Defense. America is not currently producing these magnets. The time to address this problem is now.

This amendment will help restore America’s ability to produce domestic neo magnets. It requires the Department of Defense to develop a plan for establishing this domestic capability and submit it to the congressional defense committees.

I urge my colleagues to vote in favor of the Coffman-Ellsworth amendment.

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Chairman, it’s my pleasure to yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. MCGOVERN) who has taken a leading interest in evaluating both the quality and financial impact of our activities in Afghanistan, very often doing yeoman’s work on tedious detail.

Mr. MCGOVERN. I thank the gentleman for yielding, and I also want to thank the chairman and ranking member for including this amendment in the en bloc.

Mr. Chairman, McGovern-Jones-Welch is a straightforward, bipartisan amendment. It requires the President to certify that the Afghanistan Independent Election Commission and the Afghan Electoral Complaints Commission have the professional capacity, legal authority and independence to carry out and oversee free, fair and honest elections, absent the fraud that characterized the 2009 presidential elections, before U.S. taxpayer dollars can support the next round of elections. I don’t think that that’s too much to ask.

I was in Afghanistan just after the 2009 elections. I didn’t meet anyone who thought that those elections were honest. The Embassy told me they were a fraud. The U.N. said they were a fraud. The Afghan people knew they were a fraud. Even President Karzai conceded that they were massively fraudulent. And $200 million of U.S. taxpayer money went into those elections. Just think about it, $200 million. I don’t want to see history repeat itself. I don’t want the American taxpayer ripped off again.

More is at stake than the waste of money. The U.S. military strategy depends on an honest, competent Afghan government that can win the loyalty of the people. If September’s parliamentary elections are also fraudulent, the result could be even greater local and regional turmoil.

No matter where you stand on our policy on Afghanistan, let’s make sure that the September elections are free, fair and honest. This amendment strengthens our leverage. Our uniformed men and women are fighting and dying in Afghanistan. The least we can ask is that the Afghan government carries out free, fair and honest elections.

[From the Los Angeles Times, May 10, 2010]

U.S. LOST IN AFGHAN VOTE

(By Peter W. Galbraith)

Will we ever learn? In 2009, Afghan President Hamid Karzai, who will meet with President Obama in Washington this week, ripped off American taxpayers for about $200 million. This is what the United States contributed to support presidential elections that Karzai himself admits were massively fraudulent. Now, the United Nations and the Obama administration propose to fund Afghanistan’s parliamentary elections in September, even though new rules pushed through by Karzai—over the opposition of parliament—make fraud even more likely this time.

Afghanistan’s Independent Election Commission, or IEC, a body appointed by Karzai and subservient to his wishes, was deeply implicated in the 2009 fraud. The commission and its staff either produced the phony tallies—which gave Karzai more than 1 million of his 3 million votes—or collaborated with those who did. In many instances, the commission reported pro-Karzai results from polling centers that never existed.

Fortunately, Afghanistan also had in place a truly independent body, the Electoral Complaints Commission, which was empowered to investigate fraud. Three members of that commission were appointed by the United Nations, and none of its members was chosen by Karzai. After investigating the election, the group tossed out enough phony Karzai votes to force the president into a runoff with the second-highest vote-getter, Abdullah Abdullah. In the end, that second election wasn’t held because Abdullah withdrew after the IEC adopted procedures that made fraud even more likely in the runoff.

The fact that Karzai retained the presidency didn’t mollify him. Angered by the complaint commission’s actions after the first round of last year’s vote, and determined to gain full control over Afghanistan’s election machinery, Karzai issued a decree in February giving himself the authority to appoint all five members of the Electoral Complaints Commission. He also stripped the group of its power to initiate reviews of suspicious ballots on its own. In the parliamentary elections, the group will be allowed to act only on complaints referred to it by members of the provincial election commissions, all of whom are appointed by Karzai.

The United Nations, which is supposed to help the Afghans hold honest elections, and the United States, which will pick up most of the tab for them, have responded far too meekly to Karzai’s power grab. Staffan de Mistura, the new head of the U.N. mission in Afghanistan, negotiated a deal with Karzai under which two U.N.-nominated international election experts were appointed to the complaints commission, and one of them will have veto power. Because of this compromise, De Mistura is recommending that Western donors proceed with funding the election. The Obama administration, wishing to move beyond a recent harsh exchange of words with Karzai (during which Karzai bizarrely alleged that foreigners, including the U.S. and the U.N., were responsible for fraud in the last election), seems inclined to agree.

But the proposed compromise is a sham. Karzai’s three appointees can outvote the two U.N. choices, and the compromise does not restore the Electoral Complaints Commission’s power to initiate independently reviews of suspicious votes.

There is only one positive note I’ve seen in the whole mess, and that is that Karzai unexpectedly appointed Fazel Ahmad Manawi as the new head of the IEC, replacing a chairman deeply implicated in the fraud.

This was a pleasant surprise. I met Manawi, a respected Islamic scholar from the Panjshir Valley, an opposition stronghold, when I was deputy head of the U.N. mission in 2009. At the time, he was one of seven members of the IEC, and he was clearly a person of integrity, casting the sole vote against the decision to ratify Karzai’s fraudulent election. But Manawi remains only one vote on a commission stacked with Karzai loyalists, and the leading candidate for the position of chief electoral officer is Zekria Barakzai, a smooth-talking IEC official who was a public apologist for the fraud.

Much more is at stake in Afghanistan’s elections than the waste of millions more U.S. dollars. Our counterinsurgency strategy depends on an honest and competent Afghan government that can win the loyalty of the population. During eight years in office, the Karzai administration has been ineffective and corrupt. Since Karzai’s disputed reelection, many Afghans also question his legitimacy.

If September’s parliamentary elections are fraudulent, it could lead to an ethnically based civil war. Afghanistan’s opposition dominates the parliament and has come out strongly against the new electoral procedures. The parliament is the one national institution that effectively represents Afghanistan’s non-Pashtun minorities; the speaker of the lower house is an ethnic Tajik who was the runner-up to Karzai in the 2004 elections.

The Obama administration, now that it has tenuously patched up relations with Karzai after his anti-American tirades last month, is reluctant to confront the Afghan president over electoral procedures. This reluctance is shortsighted. Insisting on procedures for honest elections now will be far less costly, both in lives and money, than having another crooked election that ends up with U.S. troops mired in even greater chaos and a broadening civil war. The Taliban will be the only true winner of yet another phony election in Afghanistan.

Peter W. Galbraith was deputy special representative of the secretary-general of the United Nations to Afghanistan from June to September 2009.

Mr. MCKEON. I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Chairman, I am pleased to yield 2 minutes to the gentlelady from Illinois (Ms. SCHAKOWSKY) who has done very careful work on making sure that the Special Inspector General for Afghanistan Reconstruction is fully discharging very important functions.

Ms. SCHAKOWSKY. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

I rise in support of this en bloc amendment, which includes my amendment to improve oversight of contractors in Afghanistan. The United States employs over 100,000 contractors in Afghanistan, and we need to ensure that we have adequate oversight. Reckless behavior by contractors can endanger our mission in Afghanistan, and failure to adequately oversee money can leave billions of taxpayer dollars vulnerable to waste, fraud and abuse.

My amendment requires the Special Inspector General for Afghanistan Reconstruction to report to Congress on existing contractor oversight and make recommendations for increasing oversight and preventing contractors with a history of waste, fraud and abuse from getting future contracts.

I would like to thank Chairman SKELTON for supporting this amendment, as well as cosponsors Congressmen MCGOVERN, CONYERS, HINCHEY and MORAN.

Mr. McKEON. Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Chairman, may I inquire how much time each side has left on this amendment.

The Acting CHAIR. The gentleman from New Jersey has 6½ minutes and the gentleman from California has 8½ minutes.

Without objection, the gentleman from Missouri will control the time.

There was no objection.

Mr. AKIN. Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. ANDREWS. I yield myself such time as I may consume.

It is very important that we take assessment of the excellent ideas in this bill that both parties support. Much of the debate this afternoon and this evening has obviously been consumed by points of controversy, but there are some major points of consensus that each side should be proud of supporting.

Number one, each side is vigorously supporting a significant pay increase for the men and women who wear the uniform of our country. Each side is supporting a very significant increase in the quality of housing, education and health care for the servicemembers and for their families.

Each side is supporting a significant step toward our Navy, reaching the point where our admirals tell us it ought to be.

In 2008, our Navy had authorized and at sea in the fleet 286 ships. Under this bill, our Navy will have authorized and at sea in the fleet 293 ships, a gain of seven ships. Mr. TAYLOR, in particular, has worked very hard on this point with the full bipartisan support of the Republican side. Our admirals tell us that the optimal size of the Navy they would like to see us have is 313 ships. So we have a ways to go, but progress is being made.

I mentioned earlier the legislation before the House authorizes $9.8 billion for our Special Operations Command. In the toughest neighborhoods in the world, in the toughest circumstances in the world, it is the men and women under the command of SOCOM who do the toughest work, and the bill on both sides supports them very substantially.

Also, as I mentioned before, this bill dramatically upgrades the amount of money we spend on identifying, securing, and disabling nuclear material that could be used to form a nuclear improvised explosive device. This is very much consistent with the administration's policy and broadly embraced by both sides.

So, Mr. Chairman, I just want you and others observing tonight to understand that it is the nature of debate that we do dwell—as we have these many hours this afternoon—on points of disagreement, and they are profound points of disagreement; but it is very important that people understand the points of agreement that are before us. Whether it is compensation for our servicemembers and their families, their health care, their housing, their job and educational opportunities, whether it is the end strength of our Navy—which, frankly, is a bipartisan commitment to bring us up to those 313 ships—whether it is the end strength of our Armed Forces; in 2008, the end strength of our Armed Forces was in the neighborhood of 1.4 million people, active duty, Guard and Reserve, a little over that. This legislation before us tonight would have the end strength of our Armed Forces exceed 1.5 million people in our active duty, Guard and Reserve.

So, Mr. Chairman, I again want to say that it is healthy, it is expected, it is anticipated that the floor of this Chamber will be a place where our points of disagreement are vigorously and honestly pursued. But as a compliment to both sides of the aisle, to Mr. McKEON and Chairman SKELTON, the legislative product that is before us tonight has many, many, many more points of consensus, and we're looking forward to building on those points of consensus.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

The Acting CHAIR. Without objection, the gentleman from California will control the time.

There was no objection.

Mr. McKEON. May I inquire as to how much time we have left on each side.

The Acting CHAIR. The gentleman from California has 8½ minutes remaining. The gentleman from New Jersey has 2½ minutes remaining.

Mr. McKEON. I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. ANDREWS. I yield myself 2 minutes.

I also wanted to make reference to the excellent work that's been done in this bill in the area of our missile defense program. Now, there are obviously disagreements over what the structure of that program ought to be; but when one looks at the fortification of defenses that we already have at Fort Greely and other places, when one looks at the additional investment that we are making in the successful regional-range missile programs that have tested and been quite efficient, I think that the accurate conclusion is that we are fortifying the defenses which have been proven to work in the missile defense field, we are building upon those successes, and we are preparing ourselves for a future generation of defenses that are effective both in a regional context and in the context of intercontinental ballistic missiles.

The nonproliferation strategy really has two aspects: it is to be prepared to defend ourselves if a strike occurs, but it is to discourage the proliferation of nuclear capability around the world, as the administration has done in the Security Council negotiations with Iran and it has done with its layered defense missile strategy. So, again, I think this is another point where there is more consensus than disagreement.

There is disagreement between the two sides over the best way to pursue an effective ballistic missile defense. I don't think there is a disagreement over whether the pursuit of a ballistic missile defense is in the interest of the country. It most certainly is.

I would conclude at this point, Mr. Chairman, where I began. We know that the cornerstone of our country's defense is not found in this Chamber. It is found at bases throughout the world, both in the Continental United States and at forward-operating bases and other places overseas. We are profoundly grateful to the men and women who volunteer to serve this country. We, on a bipartisan basis, are expressing our gratitude where it counts: compensation, support for families, education, health care, and other opportunities.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. McKEON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. AKIN).

Mr. AKIN. Just to respond briefly here on the subject of missile defense, I know we are working with some en bloc amendments. We're comfortable with those amendments. There is some disagreement on missile defense, and I think at least a considerable vulnerability that many people on our side are very concerned with was the decision not to build a ground base system in Poland and the radar in the Czech Republic, but instead, to suggest that the Aegis class cruisers could cruise around in the ocean and take care of the mission to stop ballistic missiles, particularly a longer range ballistic missile possibly equipped with a nuclear warhead coming out of Iran.

The fact of the matter is that the Aegis class missiles do not have the velocity necessary to stop a longer-range ballistic missile. And the only way we had to do that was, quite simply, the ground-based system, which is a 20-ton missile; the Aegis class missiles are more two ton. So there is a factor-of-10 difference in the weight of the missile. Obviously, the much larger missile can develop the velocity it needs to go after a very high-flying, fast-moving ballistic missile that could come from Iran as early as in the next few years.

And so there is a serious concern that, in terms of missile defense, we do not really have protection over Western Europe and our troops that are stationed in Western Europe. Of more concern to us was some level of obfuscation that we received from the Pentagon as to what the real capabilities of this potentially Standard Block 3 missile—it's called the Standard Block 3, 2A—and what sort of velocities that could attain. From the most reliable sources that I personally have been able to discuss this with and keeping things within the nonclassified setting, that missile we have very little hope will ever develop the velocity necessary to take out a high-flying ballistic missile.

So we have a big gap in our ballistic missile capabilities, and that gap is the size of Europe. And we are betting on the development of a missile that just does not have the physical size or capabilities of developing the velocities we need to protect Europe. We don't think that's good strategy. We think that's a weakness in the bill.

I still support the bill, it's a good bill—unless we put bad amendments on it. This block of amendments is okay, but we do have some weaknesses.

Mr. ANDREWS. May I inquire of the Chair how much time is remaining on each side.

The Acting CHAIR. The gentleman from New Jersey has 30 seconds remaining. The gentleman from California has 5½ minutes remaining.

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Chairman, I reserve.

Mr. McKEON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Mississippi (Mr. TAYLOR).

Mr. TAYLOR. First let me say that I agree with my chairman and the ranking member on the need to defeat the Murphy amendment.

But to Mr. AKIN's point, number one, in the past 20 years, the Panamanians, the Filipinos, and even our fellow Americans in Puerto Rico have asked us to leave. If you put your missile defense in Poland or Czechoslovakia, you are one election away from having spent billions of dollars and being asked to leave. If you put your missile defense on ships you can get to within 12 miles of the Iranian coast, you don't have to ask anyone's permission to fire it. It's there. And if you think about it, all of our known enemies have a coastline. That's why it makes sense to put our missile defense on a ship because you put the ship between our Nation and our enemies.

I thank the gentleman very, very much for yielding me the minute, and I thank the gentleman for asking a great question.

Mr. McKEON. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Again, back to this point, I think we weren't concerned on the missile defense about putting them on the ships, what we're concerned about is we don't have the missile to put on the ships. And there will be a gap in the time that we don't have the other missiles before we get the missiles for the ships. So I think that's a concern we have, and hopefully that will be worked out, that we will have a missile instead of just a planned missile.

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. ANDREWS. I yield myself the balance of my time.

First of all, I would like to thank the gentleman from California for yielding his time to the gentleman from Mississippi. We appreciate that very much.

I will just conclude by pointing out that we've heard some disagreements here about the nature of ballistic missile defense. But to my core point, there is much in this bill that has been embraced by both sides of the aisle because both sides of the aisle have a profound respect for the men and women who serve and a profound appreciation for the core duty we have to preserve and defend the country.

Mr. COFFMAN of Colorado. Mr. Chair, the Department of Defense is facing a near-term shortage of key "rare earth" materials necessary to support our defense weapon systems, and rare earth magnets are especially critical. Over 97% of rare earth production is controlled by China.

Currently, the United States does not have a manufacturer of neodymium iron boron rare earth magnets, yet they are found in our precision guided munitions, ships, aircraft, and other critical weapons systems.

Due to my concern over this critical security issue, last year I requested a Government Accountability Office, GAO, study on rare earth materials in the defense supply chain as part of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2010. Released on April 14, 2010, the recent GAO Report on Rare Earth Metals in the Defense Supply Chain has highlighted the near-term need for a sustainable supply chain of rare earths in the United States, both for critical American national defense and industrial applications.

One key finding of the GAO report was their determination that some U.S. defense contractors are currently utilizing "neo" magnets from Chinese sources and incorporating them into the weapons platforms delivered to the Department of Defense. At present, we have almost no alternatives to these Chinese components, as the United States is not currently producing these magnets. Though America is not currently producing these magnets, we have the technological know-how to do so, combined with significant deposits of rare earths.

The time to address this problem is now.

This essential amendment will help restore America's ability to produce domestic "neo" magnets. It requires the Department of Defense to develop a plan for establishing a domestic neodymium iron boron magnet capability, and submit it to the Congressional defense committees.

We cannot allow our nation to be dependent on a foreign source of these critical components. This amendment will help revitalize our domestic manufacturing sector and contribute directly to our national security.

I urge my colleagues to vote in favor of the Coffman-Ellsworth amendment.

Mr. MCGOVERN. Mr. Chair, I thank Congresswoman SCHAKOWSKY for her leadership on this amendment—and on the many issues surrounding private contractors.

Mr. Chair, this amendment is all about accountability and stopping waste, fraud and abuse. It's long past time that we increased and improved the monitoring and oversight of private contractors, especially military, defense and security contractors.

This amendment, like the provision in my bill, H.R. 5015, places these contractors under the audit and review of our existing inspectors

General, and allows the Special IG for Reconstruction in Afghanistan to make concrete recommendations to the Pentagon, State Department and USAID on how to bring to account and even stop doing business with those contractors with records of waste, fraud and abuse—let alone a record of abusing and killing innocent civilians.

Mr. Chair, this amendment is good for the American taxpayer. It's good for our national security. And it's good for our reputation and standing abroad.

It is a win-win amendment.

I ask my colleagues to support the Schakowsky-McGovern-Hinchey-Conyers-Moran amendment on expanding the oversight over and accountability of private contractors in Afghanistan.

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time and urge support of the en bloc amendment.

The Acting CHAIR. The question is on the amendments en bloc offered by the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. ANDREWS).

The amendments en bloc were agreed to.

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Chairman, pursuant to section 4 of House Resolution 1404, I hereby give notice that amendment No. 79 may be offered out of order.

The Acting CHAIR. The gentleman's request is noted.

The Acting CHAIR. The Clerk will designate the amendments en bloc.

At the end of title VIII, add the following new section:

SEC. 839. PROCUREMENT OF ARTICLES, MATERIALS, AND SUPPLIES FOR USE OUTSIDE THE UNITED STATES.

(a) REQUIREMENT.—In procuring articles, materials, or supplies for use outside of the United States, including procurements for military construction projects, the Department of Defense shall solicit bids from United States sources.

(b) EXCEPTION.—Subsection (a) shall not apply if the articles, materials, or supplies are to be procured are—

- (1) not mined, produced, or manufactured in the United States in sufficient and reasonably available quantities;

- (3) perishable, or will otherwise degrade because of the time involved in shipping.

AMENDMENT NO. 41 OFFERED BY MR. BRALEY OF IOWA

The text of the amendment is as follows:

At the end of subtitle B of title XII, add the following new section:

SEC. 12xx. REPORT ON LONG-TERM COSTS OF OPERATION IRAQI FREEDOM AND OPERATION ENDURING FREEDOM.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds the following:

(1) The United States has been engaged in military operations in Afghanistan since October 2001 and in military operations in Iraq since March 2003.

(2) According to the Congressional Research Service, through fiscal year 2009, Congress has appropriated $944,000,000,000 for the Department of Defense, the Department of State, and for medical costs paid by the Department of Veterans Affairs. This amount includes $683,000,000,000 for Iraq and $227,000,000,000 for Afghanistan.

(3) Over 90 percent of Department of Defense funds for operations in Iraq and Afghanistan have been provided as emergency funds in supplemental or additional appropriations.

(4) The Congressional Budget Office and the Congressional Research Service have stated that future war costs are difficult to estimate because the Department of Defense provides little information on costs incurred to date, does not report outlays or actual expenditures for war because war and baseline funds are mixed in the same accounts, and because of a lack of information from the Department of Defense on many of the key factors that determine costs, including personnel levels or the pace of operations.

(5) Over 2 million United States troops have served in Iraq and Afghanistan since the beginning of the conflicts.

(6) Over 4,400 United States troops and Department of Defense civilian personnel have been killed in Operation Iraqi Freedom and over 1,060 United States troops and Department of Defense civilian personnel have been killed in Operation Enduring Freedom.

(7) Over 1,340 service members have suffered amputations as a result of their service in Iraq and Afghanistan.

(8) More than 243,685 Iraq and Afghanistan veterans have been treated for mental health conditions, more than 129,654 Iraq and Afghanistan veterans have been diagnosed with Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder, and approximately 30,000 have a confirmed Traumatic Brain Injury diagnosis.

(9) Approximately 46 percent of Iraq and Afghanistan veterans have sought treatment at Department of Veterans Affairs hospitals and clinics.

(10) The Independent Review Group on Rehabilitative Care and Administrative Processes at Walter Reed Army Medical Center and National Naval Medical Center identified Traumatic Brain Injury, Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder, increased survival of severe burns, and traumatic amputations as the four signature wounds of the current conflicts.

(11) The Independent Review Group report also states that the recovery process “can take months or years and must accommodate recurring or delayed manifestations of symptoms, extended rehabilitation and all the life complications that emerge over time from such trauma”.

(b) REPORT REQUIREMENT; SCENARIOS.—Not later than the date on which the budget of the United States Government is submitted under section 1105(a) of title 31, United States Code, for fiscal year 2012, the President, with contributions from the Secretary of Defense, the Secretary of State, and the Secretary of the Department of Veterans Affairs, shall submit a report to Congress containing an estimate of the long-term costs of Operation Iraqi Freedom and Operation Enduring Freedom. The report shall contain estimates for the following scenarios:

(1) The number of personnel deployed in support of Operation Iraqi Freedom and Operation Enduring Freedom is reduced from current levels to approximately 150,000 by the end of fiscal year 2011, 65,000 by the end of fiscal year 2012, and 30,000 by the end of fiscal year 2013, and remains at that level through fiscal year 2020.

(2) The number of personnel deployed in support of Operation Iraqi Freedom and Operation Enduring Freedom is increased from current levels to approximately 235,000 by the end of fiscal year 2010, is reduced to 230,000 by the end of fiscal year 2011, is reduced to 195,000 by the end of fiscal year 2012, is reduced to 135,000 by the end of fiscal year 2013, is reduced to 80,000 by the end of fiscal year 2014, is reduced to 60,000 by the end of fiscal year 2015, and remains at that level through fiscal year 2020.

(3) An alternative scenario, defined by the President and based on current war and withdrawal plans, which takes into account expected troop levels and the expected length of time that troops will be deployed in support of Operation Iraqi Freedom and Operation Enduring Freedom.

(c) SPECIAL CONSIDERATIONS.—The estimates required for each scenario shall make projections through at least fiscal year 2020, shall be adjusted appropriately for inflation, shall be based on historical trends, and to the maximum extent practicable shall take into account and specify the following:

(1) The total number of troops expected to be activated and deployed to Iraq and Afghanistan during the course of Operation Iraqi Freedom and Operation Enduring Freedom. This number shall include all troops deployed in the region in support of Operation Iraqi Freedom and Operation Enduring Freedom and activated reservists in the United States who are training, backfilling for deployed troops, or supporting other Department of Defense missions directly or indirectly related to Operation Iraqi Freedom and Operation Enduring Freedom. This number shall also break down activations and deployments of Active Duty, Reservists, and National Guard troops.

(8) Funding already appropriated for the Department of Defense, the Department of State, and the Department of Veterans Affairs for costs related to the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan. This shall include an account of the amount of funding from regular Department of Defense, Department of State, and Department of Veterans Affairs budgets that has gone and will go to Iraq and Afghanistan.

(9) Current and future operational expenditures, including funding for combat operations; deploying, transporting, feeding, and housing troops (including fuel costs); deployment of National Guard and Reserve troops; the equipping and training of Iraqi and Afghan forces; purchasing, upgrading, and repairing weapons, munitions and other equipment; and payments to other countries for logistical assistance.

(10) Past, current, and future cost of government contractors and private military security firms.

(11) Average annual cost for each troop and combat brigade deployed in support of Operation Iraqi Freedom and Operation Enduring Freedom, including room and board, equipment and body armor, transportation of troops and equipment (including fuel costs), and operational costs.

Mr. McKEON (during the reading). Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that we dispense with the reading.

The Acting CHAIR. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

□ 1915

The Acting CHAIR. Pursuant to House Resolution 1404, the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. ANDREWS) and the gentleman from California (Mr. McKEON) each will control 10 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from New Jersey.

Mr. ANDREWS. Again, we appreciate the efforts of Members on both sides of the aisle in working through a wide array of problems in a very thoughtful way. Each of these amendments has been reviewed and accepted by both the minority and majority staff. We thank the Members for their efforts.

At this time, I yield 5 minutes to the author of one of the en bloc amendments, the gentleman from Iowa (Mr. BRALEY).

Mr. BRALEY of Iowa. I want to thank the gentleman from New Jersey for yielding.

Mr. Chairman, the amendment that I have offered is an amendment that makes great sense, especially given the enormous costs that American taxpayers have paid for Operation Enduring Freedom and Operation Iraqi Freedom.

One of the things we know is that there is a price for war. Sixty-five years ago, my father was in route from Guam to Iwo Jima as an 18-year-old marine. At that time, the world had been at war for a little over 5 years. Well, here in the United States, we have been at war, basically, since September 11 of 2001.

My amendment offers a simple, commonsense solution that requires the administration to submit a report to Congress on the long-term costs of the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan.

As I mentioned, we have been engaged in a war in Afghanistan for almost 9 years now and in Iraq for 7 years, and the Department of Defense has yet to submit a long-term estimate of the cost of these wars. The previous administration failed to submit a cost estimate despite a statutory reporting requirement for a cost estimate for fiscal years 2006 through 2011 that was required in the fiscal year 2005 defense appropriations bill.

According to the Congressional Research Service, through fiscal year 2009, Congress has appropriated at least $944 billion in Iraq and Afghanistan, and we have lost over 4,400 American lives in Iraq and over 1,060 lives in Afghanistan. Because of this immense cost, the American people deserve to have an honest estimate about how much these wars are going to cost us over the long term. This is especially critical on the issue of future health care costs.

My amendment addresses an important issue. This goes back to an Oversight Subcommittee hearing we had after the Walter Reed Building 18 fiasco in 2007. At that hearing, retired Lieutenant General Chip Roadman, a former Air Force surgeon general and a member of the Independent Review Group, told me, "We recognize the cost is immense, and it is our moral obligation to address those issues."

In the Independent Review Group report, the four signature injuries of these wars were identified. Posttraumatic stress disorder, traumatic brain injury, increased survival of severe burns, and traumatic amputations are the four signature wounds. The recovery process for these signature wounds "can take months or years and must accommodate recurring delayed manifestations of symptoms, extended rehabilitation and all the life complications that emerge over time from such trauma." We don't have a good understanding today of how much it is going to cost to take care of these wounded veterans, and we need to acknowledge the true cost.

Already, over 1,300 servicemembers have suffered amputations as a result of their service in Iraq and Afghanistan. More than 243,000 have been treated for mental health conditions. Over 129,000 have been diagnosed with posttraumatic stress disorder. These numbers will only continue to grow. We also know, according to the U.S. Life Tables, Mr. Chairman, the life expectancy of an 18- to 19-year-old male is 58 years. That means almost 60 years of treatment and care for many of these wounded veterans. That is why we need an honest and accurate assessment of the true cost of the war.

My amendment requires the President to estimate the number of veterans expected to suffer from these signature wounds and the cost it is going to take to treat them and to provide them with the care they deserve.

That is why this amendment is a commonsense, transparent requirement. It is long overdue, and it is going to give the American taxpayers, who are footing the bill for these deserving veterans, a better idea of what the long-term cost is actually going to be. That is why I urge everyone to support it.

Mr. McKEON. Mr. Chairman, at this time, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. BROUN).

Mr. BROUN of Georgia. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Chairman, I rise today in support of my amendment that is included in this en bloc amendment. It includes my language, which encourages the President of the United States to order that the U.S. flag be flown at the American outpost in Haiti. It is to be flown at this outpost as we continue to assist in our earthquake relief.

I would like to thank Chairman SKELTON and Ranking Member McKEON for their hard work on this bill and for including my amendment in this en bloc package.

As the United States extends a helping hand to our neighbor nation of Haiti, I am disheartened that the President has decided that our service men and women should not work in their outpost under the American flag and that he has ordered that the American flag cease to fly over that outpost.

The American flag is a symbol that our men and women in uniform are promoting the American spirit of rebuilding hope, prosperity, and opportunity. As a marine and naval medical officer, I understand that it is critical for morale that our military should work under the American flag, especially when our presence in a foreign country is under peaceful conditions.

As a sign of respect and support for the selfless efforts of the service men and women, I urge my colleagues to support this amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I request that my full statement be entered into the RECORD.

Mr. Chair, I would like to thank Chairman SKELTON and Ranking Member McKEON for their hard work on this critical bill, which is the life-blood for those defending our freedoms at home and abroad. And thank you gentlemen, for allowing me to offer this amendment before the House.

I rise today in support of my amendment which encourages the President to order the flag of the United States to be flown over all military and civilian outposts in Haiti during earthquake relief efforts.

As Memorial Day approaches, Americans will be honoring those brave souls who, as Abraham Lincoln said in the Gettysburg Address, "gave the last full measure of devotion" to our nation, by flying the American Flag at their homes and places of business.

However, there is one place where the flag will not be waving, and that is in the Republic of Haiti, on American outposts where our servicemen and women are leading humanitarian efforts to aid those adversely effected by the magnitude 7 earthquake that devastated the island nation.

The President has decided that the stars and stripes would be viewed with disdain in Haiti. That our servicemen and women providing basic essentials would be viewed as an occupying force if they did it under our flag. So he has ordered the Department of Defense not to fly our flag in Haiti, for fear of being viewed unfavorably by the rest of the world.

I strongly disagree with the President, and I believe he could not be more wrong about how the world views the United States and our flag. I submit that every member of this body will agree with me when I say that when tasked with a mission of mercy, there are no better ambassadors for the United States than our men and women in uniform. In Berlin after World War II, and most recently in places like The Philippines, Bolivia, Djibouti, and Colombia, it has been our service-members who have delivered hope to those who have none.

In all these places our Flag has flown proudly over these merchants of mercy. The situation is no different in Haiti, our servicemen and women are still giving hope to an impoverished people, they should be allowed to do this under the symbol that embodies all that we hold dear.

I urge my colleagues to support this amendment that honors our military and their efforts in Haiti, and encourages the President to allow them to serve under our proud flag.

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Chairman, may I inquire as to the time remaining on both sides?

The Acting CHAIR. The gentleman from New Jersey has 5½ minutes remaining, and the gentleman from California has 8½ minutes remaining.

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Chairman, at this time, I am pleased to yield 3 minutes to a gentleman who is an Appropriations subcommittee chairman and who has taken the lead on making sure that the use of private contractors is done properly, the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. PRICE).

Mr. PRICE of North Carolina. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Chairman, I rise today in support of an amendment extending oversight and accountability for security contractors overseas, for contractors performing security functions, as one element of this en bloc amendment.

The gentleman from South Carolina (Mr. SPRATT) joins me in this effort, and I also want to acknowledge the leadership of other Members, especially that of Ms. SCHAKOWSKY, in this critical area of defense policy.

This amendment is brief and straightforward. It would simply extend a section of the fiscal year 2008 defense authorization bill that strengthened the oversight of private security contractors in Iraq and Afghanistan to additional areas in which there is or could be a significant security contractor presence.

I don't need to recount here, Mr. Chairman, the arguments in favor of greater oversight and accountability for armed contractors, particularly those operating in areas in which our military is operating. The high-profile incidents of contractor misconduct that have punctuated our campaigns in Iraq and Afghanistan should speak for themselves.

In responding to these incidents, Congress has come a long way toward improving Federal management and oversight of private security contractors, most notably through several important reforms, including those in the fiscal 2008 defense authorization bill. These reforms, many of which were drawn from my broader contractor accountability legislation, have been credited with improving both the operational capabilities of the Armed Forces in Iraq and Afghanistan and Congress' ability to conduct effective oversight of private security contractors.

As our military faces new and emerging threats in other areas of the world, it is critical that these effective oversight measures be maintained and extended. This amendment seeks to do just that by extending several of the key reforms enacted in 2008 to additional areas with significant contractor presence. The amendment lists four such areas by name, but its broader intent is to give the Defense Department, the State Department, and USAID the tools and authority they need to apply these coordination and oversight mechanisms to any area in which our military is conducting significant operations.

I want to thank Chairman SKELTON, Ranking Member MCKEON and the Armed Services Committee for their leadership in drafting this legislation as well as for their support and cooperation in the effort to improve transparency and accountability in the use of contractors.

I urge my colleagues to support this amendment.

Mr. MCKEON. Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Chairman, it is my pleasure at this point to yield 1 minute to a gentleman who has been in the forefront of trying to promote American jobs through this bill, the gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. MURPHY).

Mr. MURPHY of Connecticut. Chew on this fact.

In 2007, there were 14,000 waivers granted to the Buy American law by DOD. One year later, in 2008, that number jumped to 65,000. That's a 1-year 450 percent increase in Buy American waivers that likely cost tens of thousands, if not hundreds of thousands, of U.S. manufactured jobs.

That's why the amendments being offered in this block by myself, by Representative EDWARDS, and by Representative LIPINSKI are so important, because we need to start shining a light on this outrageous flow of U.S. defense jobs overseas.

My amendment would specifically require DOD to explain large increases in waiver approvals from one year to the next, and it would require the DOD to explain if they even looked for American-made products before they granted these waivers. We want to grow American manufacturing. We need to start with the billions and billions of American taxpayer dollars spent at the Department of Defense.

Mr. MCKEON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to my friend and colleague, the gentlewoman from Maryland (Ms. EDWARDS).

Ms. EDWARDS of Maryland. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

I want to thank especially Chairman SKELTON and the House Armed Services Committee for their leadership on this issue and for their continued commitment to what it takes for our servicemembers and their families.

I want to thank most especially my colleagues, Representatives LIPINSKI from Illinois and CHRIS MURPHY from Connecticut, for working with us, for working together to advance provisions that bolster domestic job creation. There are no better advocates for domestic job growth than these two gentlemen.

Mr. Chairman, I rise today to urge a "yes" vote on this en bloc amendment as well as on the underlying legislation.

Most specifically, the amendment that I led directs the Department of Defense to start accounting for the domestic employment impact of major defense acquisition programs. With the DOD's spending billions of dollars a year, it is necessary that we are able to analyze the impact of this spending on our economy.

The amendments led by my two colleagues are as equally important. They seek to ensure that our domestic companies are included on procurement opportunities for use by the DOD overseas. The amendments also strengthen transparency of the Buy American waiver process. Taken together, these provisions close major loopholes and fix major deficiencies.

I urge a "yes" vote on this en bloc amendment.

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Chairman, at this point, I am privileged to yield 1 minute to another champion of growth of American jobs here from the runner-up city in this year's Stanley Cup finals, the gentleman from Chicago, Illinois (Mr. LIPINSKI).

Mr. LIPINSKI. I would like to commend Chairman SKELTON and Ranking Member MCKEON for all of their work on this bill and for our troops.

Mr. Chairman, I rise today in strong support of three Buy American amendments that I've offered, I along with Ms. DONNA EDWARDS and Mr. CHRIS MURPHY. These amendments would bolster national security, and they would create American jobs—two critical goals for America.

In this recession, the loss of our manufacturing base to countries such as China has only sped up. This is bad enough when it involves consumer goods, but depending on foreign companies to supply America's military weakens our national security.

When the Buy American Act was first passed in 1933, it exempted goods used abroad because of shipping time and expense, but that has changed, and it is time American manufacturers competed for these contracts. In 2008, the DOD spent over $8 billion on products used abroad. My amendment would give U.S. companies a chance to compete by requiring the DOD to solicit bids from American suppliers.

This and the other Buy American amendments will strengthen our national security and will create American jobs. I urge my colleagues to support these amendments, the en bloc amendments.

Go, Hawks.

Mr. MCKEON. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

It has been a while since I read any of these letters. Maybe some people haven't heard of these letters yet, so I would like to read them. We are only given 5 minutes to discuss Don't Ask, Don't Tell, so we have to talk about it when we get an opportunity, because this is something that I think is going to affect the 2.5 million people in the military plus their families. So we have very strong feelings about this. It is unfortunate that the majority has only given us 5 minutes in which to express our views and have a chance to let the people of America know what is happening here.

This is a letter from Secretary Gates that was written April 30, and then 2 days ago he reaffirmed his stand, that he still stands by what he wrote to Chairman SKELTON:

"Dear Mr. Chairman, I am writing in response to your letter of April 28th requesting my views on the advisability of legislative action."

So he is talking about the possibility that the Murphy amendment would be made in order for this legislation taken to repeal the so-called Don't Ask, Don't Tell statute prior to the completion of the Department of Defense review of this matter.

"I believe in the strongest possible terms that the Department must, prior to any legislative action, be allowed the opportunity to conduct a thorough, objective, and systematic assessment of the impact of such a policy change, develop an attentive, comprehensive plan, and provide the President and the Congress with the results of this effort in order to ensure that this step is taken in the most informed and effective manner.

"A critical element of this effort is the need to systematically engage our forces, their families, and the broader military community throughout this process. Our military must be afforded the opportunity to inform us of their concerns, insights, and suggestions if we are to carry out this change successfully.

“Therefore, I strongly oppose any legislation that seeks to change this policy prior to the completion of this vital assessment process. Further, I hope Congress will not do so, as it would send a very damaging message to our men and women in uniform that in essence their views, concerns, and perspectives do not matter on an issue with such direct impact and consequence for them and their families.”

Signed by the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs, Admiral Mullen, and Robert Gates, Secretary of Defense.

May I inquire as to how much time I have remaining?

The Acting CHAIR. The gentleman from California has 4½ minutes remaining; the gentleman from New Jersey has 1 minute remaining.

Mr. MCKEON. Mr. Chairman, I will continue to yield myself such time as I may consume.

What the Secretary is saying here is there was a process set in place. The President, in the State of the Union, said he wanted the repeal of Don't Ask, Don't Tell by the end of this year. The Secretary, in response, set up a process whereby the military could be contacted, their opinions could be heard, the opinions of all of them that are contacted could be taken under advisement by the Chairman, by each of the Chiefs. They could give their best military advice to the Secretary, which he could then give to the Congress and to the President as to how we proceed on this matter.

That was supposed to be done before December of this year. They are on track to do it. This month, a company was hired by competitive bid to go into the field to interview people, which they will do with various methods, to give us a comprehensive answer as to what people feel about this. They will survey 350,000 people.

Now, if this passes tonight, if this amendment passes, I know the amendment says nothing will take place prior to that study being handed in, but we all know, it is like we say we are going to talk to you, but we have already made the decision. So, go ahead, tell us whatever you want. It is like they will know that their opinions really don't matter because the vote has already taken place, the decision has already been made, and they are left out of the loop.

As the Chiefs of the various services told me, this disrespects the military, and it should not be done. Each of them have stated on the phone to me and in letters that this should not be done.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Chairman, through the Chair I would say to my friend from California, we have only Mr. KENNEDY left to speak, and I believe we have the right to close on this. So does the gentleman intend to speak again?

Mr. MCKEON. How much time do I have left?

The Acting CHAIR. The gentleman has 2 minutes remaining.

Mr. MCKEON. I would be happy to yield 1 minute to my good friend from Rhode Island (Mr. KENNEDY).

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. Chairman, I want to thank Mr. MCKEON and obviously Mr. ANDREWS for their great stewardship of this important legislation and say the real Don't Ask, Don't Tell question that we have for our military is don't ask how many antidepressants you are on because this Nation had to call you up, not once, not twice, but three and four times.

The real Don't Ask, Don't Tell question is don't ask how many parents or how many wives are at home waiting with their children, worried about their families getting called up over and over and over again because we won't up the standing military so that we don't have to overextend these tours of duty over and over and over again, creating the largest generation of military men and women who are going to be permanently scarred because of their overextension of service of duty. That is the real Don't Ask, Don't Tell.

The Don't Ask, Don't Tell is what is the long-term cost to this country, mental health-wise, for this terrible neglect of our men and women in uniform.

The Acting CHAIR. The time of the gentleman from Rhode Island has expired.

Mr. ANDREWS. I yield the gentleman 30 additional seconds.

Mr. KENNEDY. I want to thank the gentleman from New Jersey, because one more thing you won't hear the answer to is that 72 percent of the health care for veterans is going to be the private insurance market, and thanks to this gentleman, Mr. ANDREWS, and many others, who led the way for the private insurance market covering, with no preexisting condition, no annual or lifetime caps, those 72 percent of veterans out there today are going to have their cognitive neurological disorders, the traumatic brain injury, covered, covered, covered by the private insurance system, thanks to this gentleman from New Jersey, Mr. ANDREWS, and his colleagues on the Democratic side.

Mr. MCKEON. Mr. Chairman, I appreciate my friend from Rhode Island's passion, and I share that with him. I have very deep concerns about the military. They have been asked over and over again, and they have responded over and over and over again. I have been to funerals and I have looked into the parents' eyes and talked to them. I also know in war there are no unwounded, as somebody more eloquent than I stated, and that is one of the tragedies.

The other tragedy is what happened on 9/11, where we were attacked, and now we have been engaged in this worldwide war on terrorism. It is not something we asked for. It is just something that our Nation has responded from the days of the creation of this Nation, when the men rode to the sound of the guns, when they died at Valley Forge, frozen to death, starved to death. They have sacrificed for years.

I am saying, give them an opportunity to have their say, to follow through with the plan that has been set.

I yield back my time.

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Chairman, may I inquire as to the time remaining?

The Acting CHAIR. The gentleman has 30 seconds.

Mr. ANDREWS. I thank the gentleman from California for yielding the time to the gentleman from Rhode Island, and I would say, of course we recognize our duty to listen to those who serve in uniform. We also recognize our duty to raise their pay, to give them the tools and weapons necessary to do their job, to support their families, and to give them the strategy that works to defend this country. This bill does all of those things. We should support the bill and support the en bloc amendment before the body.

I yield back the balance of our time.

The Acting CHAIR. The question is on the amendments en bloc offered by the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. ANDREWS).

The amendments en bloc were agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 62 OFFERED BY MR. MCMAHON

The Acting CHAIR. It is now in order to consider amendment No. 62 printed in House Report 111-498.

Mr. MCMAHON. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment at the desk.

The Acting CHAIR. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment No. 62 offered by Mr. MCMAHON:

Page 284, after line 22, insert the following:
SEC. 727. SENSE OF CONGRESS CONCERNING THE IMPLEMENTATION OF THE CONGRESSIONALLY-MANDATED RECOMMENDATIONS OF THE INSTITUTE OF MEDICINE STUDY.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds the following:

(1) Section 717 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2008 (Public Law 110-181; 10 U.S.C. 1073 note) directed the Secretary of Defense to enter into a contract with the Institute of Medicine of the National Academy of Sciences to conduct a study and make recommendations regarding the credentials, preparation, and training of licensed mental health counselors.

(2) In the study, the Institute of Medicine of the National Academy of Sciences recommends permitting counselors to practice independently under the TRICARE program.

(3) In addition, the Institute of Medicine of the National Academy of Sciences recommends that TRICARE implement a comprehensive quality management system for all of its mental health professionals.

(b) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that the Secretary of Defense should implement the requirements of subsection (a) of such section 717 by not later than December 31, 2010, because such implementation will increase the urgently needed mental health staff of the Department of Defense and ensure that members of the Armed Forces will receive timely and confidential post-deployment screenings with a mental health professional.

The Acting CHAIR. Pursuant to House Resolution 1404, the gentleman from New York (Mr. McMAHON) and a Member opposed each will control 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from New York.

Mr. McMAHON. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, I thank the House Committee on Armed Services, led by the great gentleman from Missouri, for recognizing the significance of the increasing suicide rates in our armed services and the need to increase mental health professionals to combat this disturbing trend. I would also like to thank my colleagues, Congressman TOM ROONEY, HARRY TEAGUE and BEN LUJÁN for their partnership with me on this amendment and on veterans' mental health issues we have tackled in a very bipartisan fashion.

Mr. Chairman, serving in the military can have lingering effects on servicemembers and the families that support them. For this reason, the mental health care needs of the TRICARE population are large and diverse, requiring a skilled group of professionals to diagnose and treat a variety of disorders. Unfortunately, these professionals do not currently exist, and the mental health needs of our servicemen and -women are, quite frankly, not being met.

But Congress can help increase this pool by implementing the recommendations of the congressionally mandated Institute of Medicine study, which makes recommendations for permitting counselors to practice independently under the TRICARE program. In addition, the committee recommends that TRICARE implement a comprehensive quality management system for all its mental health professionals.

Under current TRICARE rules, mental health counselors are required to practice under a physician's supervision, and their patients must be referred to them by a physician in order for their services to be eligible for reimbursement. This requirement distinguishes them from other mental health professionals who practice without such restrictions.

This amendment would encourage the Secretary of Defense to implement these goals by the end of the year and to increase mental health professionals available to our men and women in uniform. We need to provide the coverage, but we also need to provide the professionals who can provide the care.

We see in so many cases the high rates of suicides of our returning warriors, and we must address this. Eventually, this increase will reduce the stigma of seeking mental health treatment and reduce the aberrantly high levels of suicide in the armed services, as I mentioned.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. McKEON. Mr. Chairman, I don't oppose the amendment, but I rise to claim the time in opposition.

The Acting CHAIR. Without objection, the gentleman from California is recognized for 5 minutes.

There was no objection.

Mr. McKEON. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Again, if we had been given the time to discuss Don't Ask, Don't Tell, we could have spent more time talking about all of the good things in the bill. But only having 5 minutes to discuss that, we have to use whatever time we can to explain to people what is going on.

When I talked to members of the Joint Chiefs a couple of days ago, one of them said one of the reasons that he opposes doing anything right now in opposition to the plan that was set up earlier this year was because, he says, I am here. I understand the innuendoes around the Hill. I understand the process of the amendment, and I understand that it doesn't really kick in until later. But, he said, the people in the field, the service people that we promised to hear from before we take action, don't understand that.

And he said, the headline will read, Don't Ask, Don't Tell Repealed.

Well, they don't even have to wait for us. The Senate already did it. The breaking news alert on Fox News is: "The Senate Armed Services Committee votes to repeal military's Don't Ask, Don't Tell policy on gays." And then if we follow through and do the same thing tonight with the Murphy amendment, that will be the headline. So the young men and women in Afghanistan, when they're watching on Fox News, that's what they're seeing right now.

So then when we do get around to this company that we hired to make this survey to reach out to 350,000 of our servicepeople and their families, when they hear the question they're going to say, what, you're asking us now, after the decision?

What kind of respect is that to show to our young men and women who are out there laying their life on the line?

They signed a contract. They joined the military. They're an all-volunteer force. And they signed under certain circumstances, and now those are going to be changed without any input from them.

Oh, yeah. We're going to follow through with the charade. We will have the survey, it will be turned in in December, but the die is already cast if that amendment passes tonight. And I don't think that is the way that we should be treating our military, especially the people on this committee.

Our responsibility is to look out for those young men and young women that are out there defending us and defending freedom around the world. And the lack of respect to give them the opportunity to have input on this very important issue, one that we've lived with now for 17 years, that has to be changed now, just doesn't make sense.

A Member earlier this evening talked about common sense and the lack of it that we see around here. And one of the reasons why we're given an 18 percent vote of approval from the American people, because we show a lack of common sense, we show a lack of respect. This amendment will show a lack of respect to the young men and young women in uniform and their families.

Again, let me read from Admiral Roughead's letter, the admiral, he's the Chief of Naval Operations.

He says, I share the view of Secretary Gates that the best approach would be to complete the Department of Defense review before there is any legislation to change the law. My concern is that legislation changes at this point, regardless of the precise language used in this—and this amendment was written very carefully—may cause confusion on the status of the law in the fleet and disrupt the review process itself by leading sailors to question whether their input matters.

And he is right on target.

Obtaining the views and opinions of the force and assessing them in the light of the issues involved will be complicated by a shifting legislative backdrop and its associated debate.

I plead with you to give the time necessary to have the evaluation, to follow the process that's been set.

What are we afraid of?

Is something going to happen that you think is going to change this process?

Why not let them have their input? Why not follow through with the process that was set by the Secretary?

The company that's been hired to go out and reach out to these 350,000 of our 2.5 million serving, let's follow through with the process; let's respect our young men and women in uniform and follow through with the process that has been determined.

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. McMAHON. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself the remainder of my time.

Mr. Chairman, I must apologize to my good friend, the gentleman from California, because perhaps my New York accent wasn't, my pronunciation wasn't clear enough, or perhaps I did not speak loudly enough.

The amendment that I am proposing seeks to provide to our returning warriors when they come home and when they continue their lives here in this country, to get the mental health treatment that they need that they cannot currently have.

Mr. Chairman, the issue that I spoke to in my remarks dealt with a very important issue, and that is how to make sure that this country provides the mental health services for our returning warriors. I did not think that that issue would be one that would be picked up, in my eloquence, by Fox News. I'm not quite sure how it dealt with the other issues, but I just want to be clear, and I want the record to be clear that I was speaking to amendment 62, which is, I think, a very important issue, a very important issue that everyone in this body addresses and deals with, and that is providing adequate mental health services for our returning warriors. That's all I spoke to.

That being said, at this time, I yield the balance of my time.

The Acting CHAIR. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York (Mr. McMAHON).

The amendment was agreed to.

AMENDMENTS EN BLOC NO. 7 OFFERED BY MR. SKELTON

Mr. SKELTON. Mr. Chairman, pursuant to House Resolution 1404, I offer amendments en bloc No. 7.

The Acting CHAIR. The Clerk will designate the amendments en bloc.

Amendments en bloc No. 7 offered by Mr. SKELTON consisting of amendments numbered 38, 49, 53, 60, 72, 73, and 75 printed in House Report 111-498:

AMENDMENT NO. 38 OFFERED BY MS. HERSETH SANDLIN OF SOUTH DAKOTA

The text of the amendment is as follows:

(1) the Committee on Armed Services and the Committee on Foreign Affairs of the House of Representatives; and

(2) the Committee on Armed Services and the Committee on Foreign Relations of the Senate.

The Acting CHAIR. Pursuant to House Resolution 1404, the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. SKELTON) and the gentleman from California (Mr. MCKEON) each will control 10 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. SKELTON. Mr. Chairman, I urge the committee to adopt the amendments en bloc, all of which have been examined by both the majority and the minority.

Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from New York (Mr. HINCHEY).

Mr. HINCHEY. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment that will ensure that the Department of Defense supports the growing domestic solar energy industry. The Department of Defense, as we know, is the largest consumer of energy on this planet. Fortunately, the Pentagon is beginning to more fully understand just how important energy is to our national security. As the Department purchases solar panels to address very serious energy security concerns at defense installations around our country, we must ensure that those purchases support American renewable energy manufacturing jobs rather than those at other companies in other countries.

The Buy American Act requires products purchased directly by the Federal Government to contain at least 50 percent American content. This amendment applies the Buy American Act to the procurement of solar panels purchased indirectly by the Department through subcontracts such as Energy Savings Performance Contracts, land leases, and utility service contracts. Establishing real energy security at our defense installations is critical to our national security.

This amendment is a commonsense approach to ensuring that, as the Department makes key investments in renewable energy, American manufacturing jobs are supported and increased.

I urge the support of my colleagues, and I express my deep gratitude to Chairman SKELTON for his steadfast support for our national defense.

My second amendment will help strengthen our Nation's oversight over armed security contractors in Iraq and Afghanistan and eliminate a tax loophole that has been used by the defense contractor Blackwater. For too long, the private armies of defense contractors have undermined our Nation's mission in Afghanistan and Iraq through the conduct of their personnel.

The key to American success is the ability of U.S. forces to win support from the Afghan and Iraqi people, many of whom do not distinguish between armed security contractors and the U.S. military. For this reason, every time a contractor kills or injures innocent civilians, the very people we seek to protect, it is a devastating blow to our country's strategy to protect the local population.

Let us recall one example. On May 5 of last year, two independent contractors working for Paravant, a Blackwater front company, fired their weapons, killing two Afghan civilians and wounding a third. Adding insult to injury by classifying workers in Iraq as independent contractors rather than employees, Blackwater appears to have avoided at least $31 million in employment-related taxes.

This amendment, sponsored by myself and SCHAKOWSKY and MORAN, is an amendment that requires armed private security contractors who are using U.S. citizens in Iraq or Afghanistan to hire those individuals as direct employees rather than independent contractors. The amendment is narrow and it is focused. It applies only to U.S. citizens who are required to have security clearances for armed security contracts in Iraq or Afghanistan. The amendment also contains a national security waiver provision.

This amendment will help close the door on a tax loophole and ensure contractors have full responsibility and better oversight over employees. I urge support for this amendment, and I again thank Chairman SKELTON for his work on this bill and deep commitment to the men and women of the United States military.

Mr. MCKEON. Mr. Chairman, I rise to take the time in opposition although I don't oppose the amendment.

The Acting CHAIR. Without objection, the gentleman from California is recognized for 10 minutes.

There was no objection.

Mr. MCKEON. I will reserve my time.

Mr. SKELTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1½ minutes to my friend, the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. MORAN).

Mr. MORAN of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I thank the chairman.

I want to speak specifically to this amendment that addresses a duplicitous employment practice by private security contractors in Afghanistan. Last year, four employees of Paravant, a Blackwater subsidiary, were involved in a shooting incident where a number of Afghan civilians, one was killed, others were wounded. A subsequent investigation found that Paravant employees were not classified as employees but were, instead, classified as independent contractors. Then it was revealed that Paravant classified them as independent contractors in order to avoid taking responsibility for their actions.

Raytheon, who was the main contractor on the Afghan Border Police contract, attempted to sever ties with them, but they were rebuffed because this company claimed to have no responsibility for or oversight over the four in question, even though they had hired them and were paying for them. This can't be permitted. There has to be responsibility for private contractors. They can't be free agents doing what they want over there. They are recognized as working for the American Government. We need to make employers responsible for their employees.

This is a duplicitous method of avoiding taxes, but most importantly, direct responsibility for the actions of private security contractors. It needs to be ended. And I support the other amendments that address the accountability and oversight over private security contractors.

Mr. MCKEON. May I inquire of the chairwoman what the time is remaining?

The Acting CHAIR (Ms. MCCOLLUM). The gentleman from Missouri has 4½ minutes remaining. The gentleman from California has 10 minutes remaining.

□ 2000

Mr. MCKEON. Madam Chairwoman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Again, I am sorry that we weren't given more time to debate Don't Ask, Don't Tell, but in using the time that I do have, I would like to read a couple more letters into the RECORD. This first one is from the American Legion, from the national commander, and this is a letter that he sent to President Obama.

"Dear Mr. President, The American Legion is concerned about reports that you might seek an amendment in Congress which would end the military's Don't Ask, Don't Tell policy," which amendment will be before us shortly this evening.

"As the Nation's largest wartime veterans organization, we feel strongly that the current policy has served the U.S. military well for 17 years and it would not be wise to make a major cultural change in the middle of two wars and with tension rising on the Korean Peninsula. Moreover, the Department of Defense has already directed a study on the policy, and it would be premature to act before the commission conducting the study releases its findings. It defies logic."

I will put that letter in the RECORD.

THE AMERICAN LEGION,
Indianapolis, IN, May 25, 2010.

Hon. PRESIDENT BARACK OBAMA,
The White House,
Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. PRESIDENT, The American Legion is concerned about reports that you might seek an amendment in Congress which would end the military's "don't ask, don't tell" (DADT) policy.

As the nation's largest wartime veterans organization, we feel strongly that the current policy has served the U.S. military well for 17 years and it would not be wise to make a major cultural change in the middle of two wars and with tension rising on the Korean peninsula. Moreover, the Department of Defense has already directed a study on the policy and it would be premature to act before the commission conducting the study releases its findings. It defies logic.

House Armed Services Committee Chairman Ike Skelton, who sat on the committee when DADT was implemented, opposes its repeal. Additionally, Marine Corps Commandant Gen. James Conway and Army Chief of Staff Gen. George Casey have also voiced concerns about the impact such a change would have on the current force structure.

The military is a unique environment, in which DADT has worked well without diminishing our nation's war-fighting capability. Indeed, the core purpose of our military is to fight and win our nation's wars. We believe that repealing the DADT policy at this time may well be detrimental to the security of our nation. Therefore, we urge you to postpone any such decision until the wisdom of this action has been fully studied.

Sincerely,

CLARENCE E. HILL,

National Commander, The American Legion.

The second one is from the National Military Family Association. The letter says, "The National Military Family Association has long been an advocate for improving the quality of life of our military family members who have sacrificed greatly in support of our Nation. While our association does not have a position on the Don't Ask, Don't Tell policy, we are pleased that Secretary Gates has appointed a working group charged to look at the true views and attitudes of our servicemembers and their families if that policy is repealed. We believe inclusion of servicemembers and their families in the process is imperative and that the review process must be allowed to run its course.

"Our association agrees with Secretary Gates and Admiral Mullen that the Department of Defense must be allowed, prior to any legislative action, the opportunity to complete the assessment of the impact of such a policy change, and most importantly, develop an attentive comprehensive implementation plan. Our servicemembers and their families deserve no less."

I will include that letter in the RECORD.

MAY 21, 2010.

Hon. JOHN BOEHNER,
Minority Leader, House of Representatives,
Washington, DC.

DEAR REPRESENTATIVE BOEHNER: The National Military Family Association has long been an advocate for improving the quality of life of our military family members, who have sacrificed greatly in support of our Nation. While our Association does not have a position on the Don't Ask, Don't Tell policy, we are pleased that Secretary Gates has appointed a working group charged to look at the true views and attitudes of our service members and their families if that policy is repealed. We believe inclusion of service members and their families in the process is imperative and that the review process must be allowed to run its course.

Our Association agrees with Secretary Gates and Admiral Mullen that the Department of Defense must be allowed, prior to any legislative action, the opportunity to complete the assessment of the impact of such a policy change, and most importantly, develop an attentive comprehensive implementation plan. Our service members and their families deserve no less.

We join with Secretary Gates and Admiral Mullen in opposing any legislation that seeks to change this policy prior to completion of the assessment process. Should you have any questions please contact Kathleen Moakler, Government Relations Director.

The National Military Family Association is the only national organization whose sole focus is the military family and whose goal is to influence the development and implementation of policies that will improve the lives of the families of the Army, Navy, Air Force, Marine Corps, Coast Guard, and the Commissioned Corps of the Public Health Service and the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration. For over 40 years, its staff and volunteers, comprised mostly of military family members, have built a reputation for being the leading experts on military family issues.

Sincerely,

JOYCE WESSEL RAEZER,
Executive Director.

I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. SKELTON. Madam Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to my friend, the gentleman from Mississippi (Mr. CHILDERS).

Mr. CHILDERS. I want to thank Chairman SKELTON and the Armed Services Committee for bringing this important legislation to the floor and for allowing me to introduce this amendment.

The uncertainty of whether or not a company will be awarded a military contract, as well as the finite period of time required to fulfill a contract, means that many times contractors are stuck in a cycle of ramping up and ramping down employment and, consequently, hiring, laying off, and rehiring employees. My amendment addresses this issue in the production of the various types of MRAPs our soldiers use for transportation and protection from IEDs in Iraq and Afghanistan.

The First District of Mississippi calls itself home to Navistar Defense, which produces the MRAP. Last year, Navistar was forced to lay off hundreds of employees when one of its contracts ended. More recently, Navistar was awarded another contract, requiring them to rehire 800 employees in order to meet the production deadlines put in place by the military. But the majority of these employees will be laid off again in October when the contract is completed.

My amendment ensures that the Department of Defense begins to look at ways that we can meet our military needs while at the same time making contracting decisions that save taxpayer money and keep skilled workers employed for sustainable amounts of my time.

I urge my colleagues to pass this amendment.

Mr. McKEON. May I inquire again of the time remaining?

The Acting CHAIR. The gentleman from California has 7½ minutes remaining.

Mr. McKEON. Madam Chairwoman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. CONNOLLY).

Mr. CONNOLLY of Virginia. I thank the ranking member for his graciousness. And I want to thank you, Mr. Chairman, for the management of this bill. I appreciate the bipartisan leadership the committee has provided on these issues. Let me also thank you for working with the House Foreign Affairs Committee and myself on this amendment, which requires the Secretary of Defense to establish monitoring and evaluation metrics for its activities in the Horn of Africa, specifically the Combined Joint Task Force.

Among other things, this task force partners with the Navy and CENTCOM forces to conduct maritime security operations to protect shipping routes in the Gulf of Aden near Somalia, the Gulf of Oman, the Arabian Sea, Red Sea, and the Indian Ocean. The task force currently does not use any form of metric to evaluate the effectiveness of its activities. According to a GAO report, the task force is not currently evaluating whether its activities are, in fact, achieving the desired results. This amendment would make that requirement.

I thank the chairman and the ranking member for their support of the amendment and urge its adoption.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE ACTING CHAIR

The Acting CHAIR. The Chair would like to remind those in the Chamber to keep their conversations down to a minimum. Even the Chair had a difficult time hearing the last speaker.

Mr. SKELTON. Madam Chairman, I yield 1 minute to my colleague, the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. HOYER), the majority leader.

Mr. HOYER. I thank the chairman for yielding.

I want to thank the chairman, who is one of the giants on behalf of national security, military defense, quality of life for our troops, who for decades has been one of the outstanding spokespersons for making sure that we had the defense we needed and that our troops had the equipment, the resources, the quality of life that we would expect to have our young people have. So I congratulate him. I thank Mr. McKEON, as well, for his cooperative spirit in bringing this bill to the floor.

Democrats in Congress have worked closely with President Obama to fight our enemies, promote our interests, and support our troops and their families, compiling a record of securing our Nation in stronger and smarter ways. We have strengthened America's military by putting new and better weapons into the battlefield, like more aerial drones. We have killed or captured much of the top leadership of al Qaeda and the Taliban. And for the first time, there is a clear plan for a way forward in Afghanistan, which, frankly, was neglected for years under the previous administration.

Democrats, often in the face of Republican opposition, have increased funding for human intelligence collection, cybersecurity, and security for our skies, our ports, and our borders. All of this was necessary and appropriate. We are looking out for our troops, our veterans, and our families.

Again, I say there is no Member of this body, and almost every Member, indeed, of this body on both sides of the aisle has worked together to maintain the quality of life for our troops and give them the resources they need; none more so than Chairman SKELTON, however.

Democrats are making sure that our troops get the body armor and mine-resistant vehicles they need when they are in the field, and the health care and opportunity for college education they deserve when they return home. That's good for them and it's good for our country.

Today's defense authorization bill builds on that record, authorizing crucial national security programs for fiscal year 2011. It promotes efforts to disrupt and destroy terrorist networks and strengthens the ability of our special forces to act directly against terrorist organizations. It increases our international cooperation against terrorists, especially against the Taliban in Afghanistan and Pakistan.

At the same time, it also insists on accountability, requiring semiannual reports from the administration on the status of the Taliban and the capacity of the Afghan Government and security forces. That accountability is important and necessary.

Because the threats we face have changed in a post-Cold War world, this bill also supports ballistic missile defense and nuclear counterproliferation, including the President's effort to secure all of the world's known vulnerable nuclear material in the next 4 years. The conference the President convened here in Washington was an extraordinary step forward in that effort.

Further, this bill invests in the well-being of our troops and the strength of our Armed Forces. It keeps TRICARE strong and ensures that the military families can keep their children on TRICARE policies up to the age of 26, just as all Americans can do under the health reform law that we passed.

It also reduces strain on our forces by providing for 7,000 more personnel for the Army and 500 for the Air Force, while helping all of the services rebuild the equipment and weapons systems that have been severely worn down by two wars. Now, maybe because there is an agreement on that we haven't talked about it very much.

Finally, the bill strengthens our military by providing for a process to repeal a discriminatory provision. Now, I want my friends to listen to this, and they are not going to be happy with me. I am 70 years of age. I was in college in the late fifties and early sixties. Now, Bill Clinton was in college in the late sixties. His generation of Americans were motivated by the Vietnam war one way or the other. Now, frankly, I was a member of the State senate and supported that effort in the State senate.

But in the late fifties and early sixties, the motivating force for young people in this country was civil rights. It was about living out the promise of American equality. It was about a commitment of this country, which was the bedrock of this country, that all men were created equal and endowed not by us, but by their Creator with certain unalienable rights. And I will tell my friends, I have some rhetoric here that was used in 1940, 1941, 1942, 1943, 1944, 1945, 1946, when there were some Americans you didn't have to ask, they didn't have to tell, because you knew they were African Americans. There was no hiding that. And we segregated them.

And I heard Strom Thurmond stand on the floor of the Senate, he was a Democrat, speaking about discriminating against people because of the color of their skin. Separate but equal. I have heard the same rhetoric. Let me read some of it.

"The Army is the wrong place for social experiments. Keep African Americans in their place."

I was angered in the 1950s and 1960s when I saw that kind of rhetoric because I thought that was not the America that I was so proud of. Hear that language that was used back in 1948 and read the transcripts today.

In 1990, I was the sponsor of the Americans with Disabilities Act. There was an amendment offered that said people with AIDS could not be waiters and waitresses. Why? Because people wouldn't come into restaurants if they knew that somebody with AIDS was serving them. Of course all the scientists, all the medical personnel said there was no way to transmit AIDS by handling plates or food. And I pulled out some rhetoric, interesting enough, from 1965, when the public accommodations law was considered on this floor. And guess what they said? They said, If we have African American waiters and waitresses, people won't come into our restaurant. That's why we don't have African American waiters and African American restaurants.

That was not the America for which I stand.

Strom Thurmond, however, said, and other Democrats—now, he didn't stay a Democrat, as all of you know, throughout his career—said no, we will keep people separate. And because you are driving down Route 1 from New York to Florida, and you stop and your little girl asked when the Howard Johnson's comes by, "Can I have an ice cream cone?" And you say to your little child, "I am sorry, you can't go in there. You are the wrong color. Can't stay at that hotel."

Now, in their era they thought they were being good Americans, I presume, and there were filibusters after filibusters to stop treating people as people with their God-given, unalienable rights.

Ladies and gentlemen, look to your hearts and your conscience. Look at the debates of 1948.

Is there one of us, is there one of us that would say General Powell, as Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, undermined the morale and the effectiveness of the United States Army? Is there one of us? I will yield to anybody who wants to say that he undermined the morale of our services. No one? No one? This is not a social experiment any more than that was a social experiment.

□ 2015

Anymore than 1990 when we wanted to deal with those with disabilities. It was a social experiment. It was the bedrock of what America is.

Now, I think it's unfortunate that we've spent so much time on this issue. Almost every speaker. In the beginning of my talk, I talked about the substance of this bill: fighting terrorists, keeping America safe, making sure that we have the strongest Armed Forces in the world bar none, that technically they are able to confront any enemy, anywhere, any time because we owe that to the American public to keep them safe. That is what we're committed to, a strong defense.

Barry Goldwater said when this issue came up, I care whether they can shoot straight, not whether they are straight. Why? Because he wanted to look at the content of their character, the content of their ability, the content of their commitment to this country and to their service. They were patriots. And he thought if they're patriots and they shoot straight—now let me tell you, something, friends. I don't want anybody bothering me. I don't care who they are. You hear me? And I don't want any male member of the Armed Forces bothering any female member of the Armed Forces, and I don't want anybody else bothering anybody else. Why? Because that's against the law, and it's against morality.

But I tell you, my friends, this bill is about our national security. This bill is about people who perform their service to our country. This bill is about making sure that America is safe. This bill is about making sure that we defeat terrorism and keep America safe. Let's focus on that. Let's not be distracted. Let's focus on protecting America, defeating terrorists, and taking care of our troops.

Mr. MCKEON. May I inquire how much time I have remaining?

The Acting CHAIR. The gentleman has 6½ minutes remaining.

Mr. MCKEON. I yield myself such time as I may consume.

You know, I listened raptly to the majority leader. I always try to. He always has a lot to say, and he says it very well. And that was a very eloquent speech, and because you are a Member of Congress and because we are Members of Congress, we can come here to the floor and we can express our opinion. I'm asking that the members of the armed services have the same opportunity before we have this vote tonight on the Murphy amendment.

And the reference was made to General Powell. And I was not on the committee at the time. But when Don't Ask, Don't Tell was instituted, he was a strong proponent. And he also mentioned that he didn't believe the comparison held up between the blacks having civil rights and the Don't Ask, Don't Tell.

So while I think that your comments were very, very well spoken, I think all of us should have that opportunity to have that great debate. I just think that we should follow the process that's been established where the Secretary appoints this study. They make the study, and then after the study is presented to us in December, after the military has a chance to give their say, that after the study is released, we follow the process.

I don't know why we're so afraid to stick with the policy, to listen to the members of the armed services, to give them the opportunities they have. I have letters from each of the Chairmen and the members of the Joint Chiefs saying we owe that to them. We should not break faith with them. They went out in good faith after the Secretary set that policy, and now we're short circuiting.

I would be happy to yield to the majority leader.

Mr. HOYER. I thank my friend for yielding, and I agree with my friend. As a matter of fact, I talked to Bob Gates today, and I talked to him 2 weeks ago about this issue. I was concerned about this issue and shared his view that we certainly ought to solicit the views of how and why we ought to proceed.

That is why I worked to make sure that this amendment, which was the exact same amendment adopted in the Senate Armed Services Committee a little earlier today, did in fact provide that both the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs Mike Mullen—who has made his comments on this pretty clear, as you know—Secretary Gates, and the President of the United States have to certify that the processes are in place. I understand the difference of opinion here is that, and I am sympathetic with your view.

Mr. MCKEON. Let me reclaim my time because here's what's actually going to happen. And as I talked to the chiefs on the phone, one of them said very clearly, Look. I know how this works around here. I know what this means. I know how the amendment was written, that we take the vote tonight and then we follow through the process. But it becomes a sham because the headline, as he said, would be "Don't Ask, Don't Tell," is repealed. And it's already on the headline. I just saw the news alert. "Senate votes to repeal Don't Ask, Don't Tell." He says, I understand that. But those troops out at the FOBs in Afghanistan, when they see it, when they hear it, they're going to see it's repealed. Why are you now asking me my opinion? It's done. It's a done deal.

So while we may understand that by law that it will follow through this process, in reality, it will be set tonight. And that's why we should have had more than 10 minutes, 5 minutes on our side, to discuss this. All we were given was 5 minutes. And that's why we've had to take time.

We could have spent time talking about all of the wonderful things in this bill, and yet we've had to talk because this thing is going to have more impact on our military and on our country.

You smile, Mr. Leader. And if you really feel that, then why don't we just follow the process?

And I'll be happy to yield.

Mr. HOYER. I smile only because that rhetoric was the same rhetoric that was used in 1946.

Mr. McKEON. Well, I'm sorry. I have not read that. And I'm not quoting from that same rhetoric. And as Colin Powell said, it is not the same.

In fact, this is Mr. Powell's quote: "Skin color is a benign, non-behavioral characteristic. Sexual orientation is perhaps the most profound of human behavioral characteristics. Comparison of the two is a convenient but invalid argument."

Mr. Powell's comment.

Mr. HOYER. I didn't quote Mr. Powell. I referred to him.

Mr. McKEON. I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. SKELTON. Madam Chairwoman, I yield 1 minute to my colleague, the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. FOSTER).

Mr. FOSTER. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of an amendment to optimize the technological posture of our Armed Forces, but I am also the son of a civil rights lawyer who wrote a lot of the enforcement language behind the Civil Rights Act of 1964. And I am proud to serve with our majority leader and the representative of the Pennsylvania Eighth district.

I rise in support of an amendment which would direct the Secretary of Defense to commission an independent study assessing the optimal balance of manned versus unmanned aircraft, as well as whether our military is capable of defending against an enemy force consisting of unmanned aerial vehicles. I believe it's the duty of Congress to ask hard questions and to take the long view of matters on national security.

In Afghanistan and Iraq, we've already seen how UAV technology has revolutionized warfare and how rapidly we can launch an attack half a world away without risking a single American life. Between 2002 and 2008, the number of unmanned aircraft used by the Department of Defense increased from 167 to over 6,000. This year for the first time in history, the Air Force trained more UAV pilots than traditional fighter pilots.

This amendment will help us optimize the balance between manned and unmanned aircraft, and I urge its support.

Mr. McKEON. I yield 30 seconds to the Army colonel in the Reserve, Mr. BUYER from Indiana.

Mr. BUYER. I want to thank IKE SKELTON for, years ago, his thoughtful considerations to make this policy the law. And we should not be changing this policy. It is very clear that homosexuality is incompatible with military service. The purpose of the military: We kill and break things. We inculcate young men and women with values, and those values are extremely important.

Now there are some that are trying to make this argument somehow that tolerance requires a moral equivalency. It does not when it comes to homosexuality. In fact military is the inculcation of values, to say that we're going to say that sodomy now should be repealed from the Uniform Code of Military Justice is wrong.

The Acting CHAIR. Without objection, the gentlewoman from California controls the time.

There was no objection.

The Acting CHAIR. The gentlewoman has 1 minute remaining.

Mrs. DAVIS of California. Madam Chair, I yield that time to the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. FOSTER).

Mr. FOSTER. Thank you for yielding an additional minute.

As I was explaining that this year for the first time in history, the Air Force trained more UAV pilots than traditional fighter pilots. However, our fleet of unmanned aircraft has expanded, and we have also maintained and continued to build a large force of conventional manned aircraft.

This study will help Congress better understand the optimal most cost-effective balance between the two for a range of operations. It will also help us determine the feasibility and desirability of a more rapid transition to unmanned aircraft for these operations.

This study will also force the Department of Defense and Congress to confront the fact that the United States is not the only Nation capable of building and deploying these very effective, very lethal technologies. If the future of warfare lies in unmanned technology, will our military be prepared to defend the United States and its allies against attacks by enemies who possess large numbers of unmanned aircraft?

It's my hope that this study will help Congress prioritize and plan for this future and adopt the most cost-effective mix of manned and unmanned aircraft. I urge my colleagues to support this amendment, and I thank Chairman SKELTON for his hard work in bringing this amendment to the floor.

Mr. McKEON. I yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. GOHMERT).

The Acting CHAIR. The gentleman is recognized for 30 seconds.

Mr. GOHMERT. I was shocked to hear the majority leader bring up the Americans with Disability Act. It was a wonderful thing that this Congress did in making all areas accessible to those with disability. But to bring it up in this debate next brings the question, will this majority not stop meddling with the military, and next we expect an extension of the ADA so that the military will next be required to put those who are disabled on the front lines to defend the Nation?

It's time to stop meddling. Let the military do the job for which they were assigned and for which they volunteered. Put the military in charge.

The Acting CHAIR. The question is on the amendments en bloc offered by the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. SKELTON).

The amendments en bloc were agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 79 OFFERED BY MR. PATRICK J. MURPHY OF PENNSYLVANIA

The Acting CHAIR. It is now in order to consider amendment No. 79 printed in House Report 111-498.

Mr. PATRICK J. MURPHY of Pennsylvania. Madam Chair, I have an amendment at the desk.

The Acting CHAIR. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

The Acting CHAIR. Pursuant to House Resolution 1404, the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. PATRICK J. MURPHY) and a Member opposed each will control 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. PATRICK J. MURPHY of Pennsylvania. Madam Chair, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Madam Chair, when I served in Baghdad, my team did not care whether a fellow soldier was straight or gay. We cared if they could fire their M-4 assault rifle or run a convoy down Ambush Alley; could they do their job so that everybody in our unit would come home safely.

With our military fighting two wars, why on Earth would we tell over 13,500 able-bodied Americans that their services are not needed? This policy hurts our national security, and it has cost the American taxpayers over $1.3 billion already on this unjust policy.

Our troops deserve a Congress that puts their safety and our collective national security over rigid partisan interests and a close-minded ideology.

I urge my colleagues to support this amendment and support the brave men and women willing to take a bullet for our families.

I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. MCKEON. Madam Chair, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

The Acting CHAIR. The gentleman from California is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. MCKEON. Madam Chair, I yield 1 minute to the distinguished chairman of the Armed Services Committee. But before doing that, I ask unanimous consent that the time for debate on amendment No. 79 offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. PATRICK J. MURPHY) be extended by 30 minutes, evenly divided between opponent and proponent.

The Acting CHAIR. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

Mr. PATRICK J. MURPHY of Pennsylvania. I object.

The Acting CHAIR. Objection is heard.

Mr. MCKEON. Madam Chair, in that case, I yield 1 minute to the distinguished chairman of the committee, Mr. SKELTON.

Mr. SKELTON. Madam Chairman, the bill before us is an excellent piece of legislation; it's one of the best that our committee has written. It's strong on our attempt to quell terrorism, it takes care of the troops, and it looks after their families.

On this issue before us, inquiry was made of Secretary Gates and Joint Chiefs of Staff Chairman Admiral Michael Mullen. A letter dated April 30 states: "Therefore, I strongly oppose any legislation that seeks to change this policy prior to the completion of this vital assessment process. Further, I hope Congress will not do so as it would send a very damaging message to our men and women in uniform that, in essence, their views, concerns, and perspectives do not matter on an issue with such direct impact and consequence for them and their families."

I oppose the amendment.

Mr. PATRICK J. MURPHY of Pennsylvania. Madam Chair, I yield 30 seconds to my fellow Blue Dog and strong leader on this issue, Mr. MATHESON of Utah.

Mr. MATHESON. Madam Chair, anyone who is willing to put on this country's uniform and put his or her life on the line to protect our freedoms deserves our respect and should not be subject to discrimination. Repealing this flawed policy is an important way for us to show that respect. I urge my colleagues to support this amendment.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRIES

Mr. WAMP. Madam Chairman, parliamentary inquiry.

The Acting CHAIR. The gentleman will state his inquiry.

Mr. WAMP. Could the Chair tell me if it might be in order for the time to be extended on this very, very important matter before the House at least equal to the time that might be taken by the Speaker of the House?

The Acting CHAIR. Only by unanimous consent, which was just unsuccessful.

Mr. WAMP. May I ask unanimous consent, then, that the time be extended equally so that the time that the Speaker may claim to speak on her side of this issue might be allotted to the minority?

The Acting CHAIR. Can the gentleman state a specific amount of time?

Mr. WAMP. I wish we could; we don't know. I just think 5 minutes per side is not sufficient on a matter this important before the House.

The Acting CHAIR. The gentleman will restate his unanimous consent request.

Mr. WAMP. I ask unanimous consent that the time on this amendment be extended by 15 minutes per side.

The Acting CHAIR. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Tennessee?

Mr. PATRICK J. MURPHY of Pennsylvania. I object.

The Acting CHAIR. Objection is heard.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. Madam Chair, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

The Acting CHAIR. The gentleman will state his inquiry.

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. Do the records of the House contain the length of time of the speech made by the minority leader on the health care bill under a 1-minute recognition?

The Acting CHAIR. The Chair cannot serve as historian.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

Mr. HUNTER. Madam Chair, parliamentary inquiry.

The Acting CHAIR. The gentleman from California will state his parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. HUNTER. Is it proper for the gentleman who this amendment belongs to to object to debate on his own amendment?

The Acting CHAIR. Any Member may object.

Mr. HUNTER. Even to their own, which they should want to discuss, Madam Chair?

The Acting CHAIR. Any Member may object.

The gentleman from California is recognized.

Mr. MCKEON. Madam Chairwoman, may I yield 5 seconds to the sponsor of the amendment to say why you don't want it discussed fully?

The Acting CHAIR. The gentleman may yield.

Mr. MCKEON. The gentleman doesn't wish to respond?

The Acting CHAIR. The gentleman from California is recognized.

Mr. MCKEON. I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Madam Chairwoman, next Monday is Memorial Day. Americans will pause in many ways and in many places to honor and celebrate the courage, sacrifices, and patriotism of those who have served and are serving this Nation in the Armed Forces.

The Hill newspaper yesterday carried a special insert entitled, "A Tribute to the Troops." Among the contributors were Mrs. Michelle Obama and Dr. Jill Biden. They coauthored a piece emphasizing that "it is our sacred obligation as Americans to take care of the men, women, and families who protect and serve this country."

I could not agree more with them. We do have a sacred obligation to those who care to serve. That is why today I rise in strong opposition to the amendment being offered by Representative MURPHY that would have Congress act to repeal Don't Ask, Don't Tell even before the comprehensive review directed by the Secretary of Defense is completed and even before Congress has received the comprehensive views of those who will be most directly affected by any change in the law.

They have unhesitatingly and selflessly responded in a magnificent manner, without hesitation, putting mission and Nation ahead of self and family. Now the proponents of repealing Don't Ask, Don't Tell want to rush a vote to the floor, disrupting the process that was put in place earlier this year to get input from those people most affected by this decision.

After making the continuous sacrifice of fighting two wars over the course of 8 years, the men and women of our military deserve to be heard. Congress acting first is the equivalent of turning to our men and women in uniform and their families and saying, your opinions don't count.

I've read into the RECORD letters from the chairmen of each of the services asking us to not do this. Don't disrespect the military. Give them the opportunity to have their input.

The Secretary also sent us a letter, and his letter said: "I believe in the strongest possible terms that the Department must, prior to any legislative action, be allowed the opportunity to conduct a thorough, objective, and systematic assessment of the impact of such a policy change. A critical element of this effort is the need to systematically engage our forces, their families, and the broader military community throughout this process. Our military must be afforded the opportunity to inform us of their concerns, insights, and suggestions if we're to carry out this change successfully. Therefore, I strongly oppose any legislation that seeks to change this policy prior to the completion of this vital assessment process."

"Further, I hope Congress will not do so as it would send a very damaging message to our men and women in uniform that, in essence, their views, concerns, and perspectives do not matter on an issue with such direct impact and consequence for them and their families."

Now, I know that this amendment and those proponents will say, well, we're going to take this vote, but we will still follow the process. We will have the survey. But you all know, I mean, you have to know that when the surveyors go out into the field, they're already going to have heard on the news—as was already reported on Fox News tonight—the Senate repealed Don't Ask, Don't Tell. So how are they given an opportunity to—I mean, this is a sham. It is a total sham from here forward if this amendment passes tonight.

You have the chairman of the committee, a man who has devoted years of his life to our young men and women in uniform, and it's not an easy thing for him, but he stands up to say no on this amendment. I join him in saying no on this amendment. Most of the members of the committee—if we had had a chance to bring this up in committee where it should have been, it wouldn't be here tonight.

The Acting CHAIR. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. PATRICK J. MURPHY of Pennsylvania. Madam Chair, I yield 30 seconds to the chairwoman of the Personnel Subcommittee on the House Armed Services Committee, Mrs. DAVIS from California.

Mrs. DAVIS of California. Madam Chair, we are listening to our troops and military leaders. I held two hearings on this policy. DOD is gathering service and family member feedback. Remember, this process was set up to understand how to implement reform, not whether it should happen. That in 10, Madam Chair, is contained in the amendment.

Don't Ask, Don't Tell weakens our national security by asking service-members to lie, firing them for being gay, and telling able recruits, We don't want you. Please, America can do better. Vote "yes."

Mr. TAYLOR. Madam Chair, I rise for a unanimous consent request.

The Acting CHAIR. The gentleman will state his request.

Mr. TAYLOR. I request unanimous consent to support the wishes of Chairman SKELTON and Ranking Member MCKEON in opposition to this amendment.

The Acting CHAIR. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

There was no objection.

Mr. PATRICK J. MURPHY of Pennsylvania. Madam Chair, I yield 30 seconds to the gentleman from Michigan, a freshman Congressman, a former lieutenant commander of the United States Navy Reserve, Mr. PETERS.

Mr. PETERS. Madam Chair, as a former lieutenant commander in the United States Navy Reserve, I strongly support Representative MURPHY's amendment. We must allow our military to recruit and retain any qualified, patriotic, and courageous American who wants to serve our country.

During my service in the United States Navy Reserve, I served with many brave, patriotic, and dedicated men and women who were always ready to serve their country anytime and anywhere. I was never concerned about their sexual orientation, just their ability to serve the United States honorably. I urge passage of the Murphy amendment.

Mr. PATRICK J. MURPHY of Pennsylvania. Madam Chair, I yield 30 seconds to the gentleman from Minnesota, the highest ranking enlisted soldier ever to serve in the United States Congress, Command Sergeant Major TIM WALZ.

□ 2045

Mr. WALZ. I thank the gentleman.

Madam Chair, the greatest privilege I've had in my life has been in serving this Nation for almost 25 years in uniform. I know how important it is to fill our military with qualified professional and motivated volunteers. We are blessed in this Nation. That's exactly what we have. It is time for us to honor their professionalism and know that they are ready to end this discriminatory practice.

I support this amendment because it allows for the study of implementation, and it allows the Department of Defense to implement it after their study is done.

We do this all the time in the military. It took us 6 months to change from hats to berets. The process will be orderly. It will be right down the line the way it needs to be, and at the end of the day, don't question their ability to do it. I support the amendment.

Mr. SHIMKUS. I have a unanimous consent request, Madam Chair.

The Acting CHAIR. The gentleman will state his unanimous consent request.

Mr. SHIMKUS. Madam Chair, as a 20-year Army veteran, 5 years of active infantry and Airborne Ranger—I don't wear it on my sleeve—I support Ranking Member MCKEON and Chairman SKELTON. This is devastating to the warfighters and to the combat infantrymen.

The Acting CHAIR. The Chair recognized the gentleman for a unanimous consent request, but not for debate.

Mr. PATRICK J. MURPHY of Pennsylvania. Madam Chair, it is my great privilege to yield 30 seconds to my mentor on civil rights, the Freedom Rider and great civil rights leader, the gentleman from Georgia, Mr. John Lewis.

Mr. LEWIS of Georgia. Madam Chair, "Don't Ask, Don't Tell." What does it mean? It didn't make sense then, and it doesn't make sense now.

Just like the military helped end segregation based on race, we should have put an end to Don't Ask, Don't Tell long ago. It is an affront to human dignity and to the dignity and the worth of every man and woman serving in our military.

We cannot wait. We cannot be patient. We must end discrimination in the military, and we must end it now. Discrimination is wrong, and we must end it now.

Mr. PATRICK J. MURPHY of Pennsylvania. Madam Chair, how much time is remaining?

The Acting CHAIR. The gentleman from Pennsylvania has 1½ minutes remaining.

Mr. PATRICK J. MURPHY of Pennsylvania. Madam Chair, I yield 1 minute to the Speaker, the gentleman from California (Ms. PELOSI).

Ms. PELOSI. I thank the gentleman for yielding and for his leadership and service to our country.

Madam Chair, this weekend, on Memorial Day, America will come together to honor all those who have served our Nation in uniform, and those brave Americans have no better friend than the chairman of our Armed Services Committee, Mr. SKELTON.

Today, by repealing the discriminatory Don't Ask, Don't Tell policy, we also honor the service and sacrifice of all who dedicated their lives to protecting the American people. We honor the values of our Nation, and we close the door on fundamental unfairness.

In 1993, I spoke on this same House floor, calling on the President "to act definitively to lift the ban that keeps patriotic Americans from serving in the U.S. Armed Forces because of their sexual orientation." Instead, despite everyone's good intentions, Don't Ask, Don't Tell was enacted—a policy which has been discriminatory to our brave men and women in uniform.

Under Don't Ask, Don't Tell, more than 13,000 men and women in uniform have been discharged from the military. Thousands more have decided not to reenlist. Fighter pilots, infantry officers, Arabic translators, and other specialists have been discharged at a time when our Nation is engaged in two wars.

That is why I support repealing Don't Ask, Don't Tell, and that support has come from all over the country. Nearly 8 out of 10 Americans want to end this era of discrimination.

Admiral Mullen, the current Chairman of the Joint Chiefs said, "It is my personal belief that allowing gays and lesbians to serve openly would be the right thing to do. We have in place a policy which forces young men and women to lie about who they are in order to defend their fellow citizens." He went on to say, "For me, personally, it comes down to integrity—theirs as individuals and ours as institutions."

General Colin Powell, who was Chairman of the Joint Chiefs when this policy was implemented, has said that he now thinks this restrictive policy should be repealed.

Then, in a letter to Congress, 51 retired generals, admirals, and a former

Army Secretary called for the repeal of this policy, saying that they "have dedicated our lives to defending the rights of our citizens to believe whatever they wish."

Passing this amendment today respects the timeline of the Pentagon's Implementation Study Group. Repeal would take place only after the study group completes its work in December 2010 and after the President, the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and the Secretary of Defense all certify that repeal will not hurt military readiness or unit cohesion. No one in this body would jeopardize our national security.

America has always been the land of the free and the home of the brave. We are so because of our brave men and women in uniform who have been willing to fight for our country. Let us honor their service by recommitting to the values they fight for on the battlefield.

I urge my colleagues to vote for the repeal of this discriminatory policy of Don't Ask, Don't Tell and to make America more American.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I would like to acknowledge the leadership of several members in bringing this amendment to the floor today:

Congressman PATRICK MURPHY. Before Congressman MURPHY came to the House, he was a Captain in the 82nd Airborne Division and served as a paratrooper in the Iraq War. He understands the issue of military readiness and has demonstrated tremendous leadership on repealing a policy that harms our national security.

Chairman BARNEY FRANK.

Congresswoman TAMMY BALDWIN.

Congressman JARED POLIS.

The Acting CHAIR. The gentleman from Pennsylvania has 30 seconds remaining.

Mr. PATRICK J. MURPHY of Pennsylvania. Madam Chair, former Air Force Sergeant David Hall was walking into this gallery when I was walking in today.

Sergeant Hall wasn't asked. Sergeant Hall didn't tell. Someone outed him for being gay, and he was kicked out of the Air Force. He had already served in the Middle East.

He said to me, "I assure you I am fit for military duty. Please stop discharging patriotic Americans who just want to serve the country they love."

Mr. SPRATT. Madam Chairman, I was a member of Congress and served on the House Armed Services Committee, when the "Don't Ask, Don't Tell" policy was adopted. It was a clever solution, but the policy and its consequences deserve an updated review.

The Secretary of Defense, Robert M. Gates, has proposed such a review. He told the House Armed Services Committee that he had managed several large institutions, like the Department of Defense and the Central Intelligence Agency, and had found that when imposing major policy changes, it was better not to cram change from the top-down, but to help it percolate from the bottom-up. What Secretary Gates proposed was a year-long review, bringing the troops into the dialog, and weighing issues like fraternization and problems not even apprehended at this point.

In a letter to Chairman IKE SKELTON dated April 30, Secretary Gates wrote: "I believe in the strongest possible terms that the Department must, prior to any legislative action, be allowed the opportunity to conduct a thorough, objective, and systematic assessment of the impact of such a policy change; develop a comprehensive implementation plan, and provide Congress and the President with the results of this effort in order for it to be taken in the most informed and effective manner. A critical element of this effort is the need to systematically engage our forces, their families, and the broader military community throughout this process. Therefore, I strongly oppose any legislation that seeks to change this policy prior to completion of this vital assessment process."

I basically agree with Secretary Gates and will vote to support the process of review that he and Admiral Mullen have laid out.

Mr. HOLT. Madam Chair, as I listen to the arguments of those who wish to continue the policy of driving gay or lesbian soldiers, sailors, airmen, and marines out of military service, I am reminded that the people of the United States are a pragmatic people.

Those who wish to exclude gays tell the American people that the inclusion of gays would harm the morale, cohesion, and effectiveness of the military in defending our nation. They ask everyone to ignore the unmistakable parallels between their arguments and the arguments made in the 1940's against the racial integration of the services. Never mind, they say, that the same arguments about morale, cohesion, and effectiveness were offered to preserve the despicable policy of racial segregation. Never mind, they say, that back then it was claimed that it would devastate our Army's effectiveness if white soldiers had to share a barracks or bunkhouse or showerhouse with a black man.

Those who want to continue the practice of driving gays out of military service ask everyone to ignore that gays do and always have served in the U.S. military.

Suddenly all of American history became clear to me. Now I understand the devastating effect of gays in our military. Now I understand why we failed to win our independence from the British. Although I could never understand before why the United States lost two wars to the Germans and the Axis, now I realize it was because our military could not be effective. The presence of gays, despite our nation's material and economic might, so crippled our military morale, cohesion, and effectiveness that we were helpless and hopeless. Now I understand that is what happens if we allow gays to serve in the defense of our nation.

Mr. BISHOP of Georgia. Madam Chair, I agree with the Secretary of Defense and the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff that the time has come to repeal the current "Don't Ask, Don't Tell" policy, which dishonors men and women who are willing to give their lives in service to our country and also prevents capable men and women with vital skills from serving in the armed forces. However, I believe a vote today is premature.

Secretary Gates and Admiral Mullen indicated initially that the impact of such a drastic change in military and cultural policy should be thoroughly reviewed, studied, and appropriate policies developed by the Department of Defense before Congress takes legislative action. Such a review and policy development would be completed by December 1, 2010.

Therefore, I believe Congress should forgo legislative action until appropriately informed by the Pentagon's impact study, policy development, and implementation plan.

Mr. ACKERMAN. Madam Chair, I rise today in support of the Murphy Amendment to the National Defense Authorization Act to repeal "Don't Ask, Don't Tell."

The time to end this absurd policy is long past due. Since it was implemented in 1994, "Don't Ask, Don't Tell" has resulted in more than 13,000 gay and lesbian servicemembers being discharged for no reason other than their sexual orientation. As the United States has fought wars in Afghanistan and in Iraq, hundreds of mission-critical troops, including crucial Arabic and Farsi linguists, have been discharged because the Department of Defense believed they were gay. Such blatant discrimination is both morally wrong and, from a practical perspective, self-defeating.

Last year, I received a letter from a gay soldier from Long Island who has bravely served our nation for more than twenty years in two branches of our military. Throughout his numerous tours of duty in Afghanistan and in Iraq, he has earned multiple bronze stars. Although he could retire, he did not want to leave the military when our nation needed him most. So, he volunteered for another combat zone deployment.

In his letter, this soldier told me that he has served side-by-side with gay soldiers from the United Kingdom, Canada, and Australia and has seen no evidence to suggest that these nations, which have no discriminatory policies against gay and lesbian servicemembers, have a problem with unit cohesion. In fact, an openly gay officer from Australia with whom he served was decorated with a U.S. medal at the end of his tour.

This soldier concluded by asking if, after looking at his service record, I thought the military and our nation would be better off without his service. My answer is absolutely not. I thank him for his service and proudly cast my vote to allow him and all other gay and lesbian servicemembers to continue their service to our nation without living in fear of being discharged for simply being who they are. Our service men and women deserve a policy that honors the principles they protect. I stand with our nation's principles. I support the Murphy amendment.

Mr. HONDA. Madam Chair, I rise today to support the Repeal of Don't Ask, Don't Tell. During his State of the Union address, President Obama declared that his administration would work with Congress to end the Don't Ask, Don't Tell policy of excluding openly lesbian, gay, bisexual, and transgender, LGBT, Americans from serving their country in the armed forces. I have long envisioned our country reaching this moment, and am thrilled that the 111th Congress will soon take another step forward in our long journey toward equality regardless of race, nationality, gender, and sexual orientation.

Reflecting one of our country's last officially sanctioned forms of bigotry, the Don't Ask, Don't Tell policy stigmatizes patriotic Americans by excluding them from military life. This policy works to silence LGBT personnel among the ranks of our military, making them invisible to the American public they bravely volunteer to defend. Notwithstanding the Don't Ask, Don't Tell policy, countless veterans have served, and countless service members continue to serve selflessly in the defense of our nation. Yet while thousands of our men and women put their lives on the line to protect our freedom and liberty, many are dismissed once their orientation or identification becomes known. According to the Servicemembers Legal Defense Network, SLDN, over 1,200 service personnel were unfairly stigmatized when discharged as being unfit for service in 2001. The contributions made by LGBT veterans and those in active duty in an atmosphere hostile to them underscores the tremendous sacrifices they make to serve this nation.

Another reason for the repeal of this government-sanctioned discrimination is the law's disproportionate impact on women and minorities. Servicemembers United compiled Department of Defense (DOD) data showing that in 2008, 45 percent of troops discharged under Don't Ask, Don't Tell were minorities, while minorities comprised 30 percent of the service. Similarly, women accounted for 34 percent of the discharges but were only 14 percent of the military. That a discriminatory policy has an even more discriminatory application is another reason to celebrate its abolishment.

When President Obama called for the repeal of Don't Ask, Don't Tell, Defense Secretary Gates reminded the Congress of their definitive role in changing the intolerant policy. I am proud that this Congress is acting. While I realize this repeal is still contingent on a completion of the DOD Study and certification from the President, I am confident that Don't Ask, Don't Tell is at its end. I appreciate the difficulty of the DOD's task and I commend their courage to take this step forward for our country. I am proud to cast a vote for repeal of Don't Ask, Don't Tell—we cannot let the opportunity to right this wrong pass us by.

Mrs. MALONEY. Madam Chair, it is time to repeal the "Don't Ask, Don't Tell, Don't Pursue" policy and to allow lesbian, gay and bisexual persons to serve openly in the military.

From the initial introduction of this profoundly misguided policy in 1993, I have never wavered in my belief that our nation's armed forces should not discriminate against otherwise qualified citizens on the basis of their sexual orientation. Today, at a time when our nation is engaged militarily in both Iraq and Afghanistan, the extent to which the so-called compromise "Don't Ask, Don't Tell" policy has damaged America's military readiness has become even more apparent than it was seventeen years ago.

The policy against allowing lesbian, gay, and bisexual service members to serve openly has resulted in depriving our armed forces of the abilities, experience and dedication of thousands of qualified active duty personnel. This institutionalized discrimination is completely illogical and counter-productive as we grapple with an increasingly dangerous world, with our servicemembers serving all over the world.

The U.S. Government Accountability Office, GAO, has documented the cost to our nation. In 2005, the GAO estimated the cost of discriminating against service members on the basis of their sexual orientation at nearly $200 million over the course of just the last decade. This estimate may, in fact, be too low, as the GAO itself acknowledged and as other studies conducted by reputable academic institutions like the Michael Palm Center at the University of California have documented.

Advocates for the "Don't Ask, Don't Tell" policy continue stubbornly to cite elusive factors to justify its inherent institutionalized discrimination. The most common argument is the specious insistence that "unit cohesion" among the armed forces will suffer if lesbians, gay men, and bisexual persons are allowed to serve openly—an argument that even Richard Cheney, while serving as the Secretary of Defense during the presidency of George H. W. Bush, acknowledged in congressional testimony was "a bit of an old chestnut to be tossed onto an open fire and consigned forever to the ashbin of history."

The fact is that many other nations—including trusted allies whose armed forces are respected around the world such as Great Britain, Israel, Australia, and Canada—have allowed their citizens to serve in their armed forces regardless of their disclosure of their sexual orientation. It is high time that the United States of America, which prides itself as a beacon of liberty and equality, joins their ranks.

I urge the members of this House to vote to repeal this misguided and counterproductive and un-American policy.

Mr. NADLER. Madam Chair, I am pleased that today we are finally faced with an amendment on the floor to end the policy of Don't Ask, Don't Tell. Seventeen years ago, I introduced a bill to ban discrimination in the Armed Forces on the basis of sexual orientation. I commend Congressman PAT MURPHY for his great efforts that have resulted in finally getting this amendment on the floor today.

Now it is up to us to repeal Don't Ask, Don't Tell once and for all. I opposed this policy and voted against it at its inception, I have introduced legislation over the years to repeal it, and I am a proud co-sponsor of H.R. 1246, the Military Readiness Enhancement Act which would end this policy. And I stand before you today to support its inclusion in the Defense Authorization bill. Let us move promptly to end this discriminatory policy and ensure that all service members, regardless of sexual orientation, can enjoy the freedoms for which they so selflessly fight.

This absurd and overtly discriminatory policy remains a stain on our national conscience and tarnishes the march toward equality for all Americans. And, in this time of incredible strain on our military, our nation's security depends upon the recruitment—and retention—of every person willing and able to serve. I entirely reject the argument that allowing gays and lesbians to serve openly would undermine troop morale. We don't need any study to know that this canard is simple prejudice, for which there is no evidence whatsoever. We should act as President Truman did in 1948. No study—no delay. Just repudiate the prejudice and end the discrimination.

To his great credit, President Obama has repeatedly declared his commitment to repealing Don't Ask, Don't Tell and he supports our efforts today to do so.

I appreciate the fact that the Department of Defense has also implemented regulatory changes concerning current enforcement of the policy, which should lead to fewer unwarranted discharges. But in order to repeal the policy we, Congress, must act, and that is exactly what we are doing here today. We owe it both to our service members and to LGBT Americans to move forward now without further delay.

Mr. PATRICK J. MURPHY of Pennsylvania. Madam Chair, I urge my colleagues to support this amendment, and I yield back the balance of my time.

"§2789. Recovery of Department of Defense property: unauthorized or improper disposition

"(a) PROHIBITIONS.—No member of the armed forces, civilian employee of the Government, employee or agent of a contractor, or any other person may sell, lend, pledge, barter, give, transfer, or otherwise dispose of any clothing, arms, articles, equipment, or any other military or Department of Defense property—

"(1) to any person not authorized to receive the property in accordance with applicable requirements established by the Department of Defense or a component thereof; or

"(2) in violation of applicable demilitarization regulations of the Department of Defense or a component thereof.

"(b) SEIZURE OF IMPROPERLY DISPOSED OF PROPERTY.—If a member of the armed forces, civilian employee of the Government, employee or agent of a contractor, or any other person has improperly disposed of military or Department of Defense property in violation of subsection (a), any civil or military officer of the United States or any State or local law enforcement official may seize the property, wherever found.
