STATEMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Mr. BAUCUS (for himself, Mr. TESTER, and Mr. BURR):

S. 1460. A bill to grant the congressional gold medal, collectively, to the First Special Service Force, in recognition of its superior service during World War II; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President: When speaking of the Royal Air Force before Parliament, British Prime Minister Winston Churchill said: "Never in the field of human conflict was so much owed by so many to so few."

Churchill's words would ring true for the First Special Service Force as well. An elite and clandestine military unit during World War II, the Force was trained for the most difficult missions over the most arduous terrain. The Force pioneered many of the tactics used by today's Special Operations Forces. Their courage and audacity helped break through Nazi lines. Surprise night raids. Scaling cliffs. Traaversing snowy mountain passes. The Force never faced a mission that was too difficult or too dangerous to accomplish.

It is a great honor to introduce legislation today with my colleagues Senator TESTER and Senator BURR bestowing the First Special Service Force with the Congressional Gold Medal.

The Congressional Gold Medal is the highest honor the United States Congress can present. It is reserved for an individual—or group of individuals—who performs an outstanding act of service to the United States. I can think of no group of men more deserving of this high honor than the First Special Service Force.

The Force was comprised of volunteers from 49 States, the District of Columbia, and Canada. These men trained at Fort Harrison, in Helena, MT. Later, they were nicknamed the Black Devil's Brigade by a German soldier who complained they attacked in the middle of the night and then disappeared.

The Force's training in Helena, Vermont, and Virginia was unconventional and brutal. Hand-to-hand combat. Demolition. Rock climbing. Ski and mountain warfare. Amphibious landings. Night air drops. Their training far surpassed that of any other unit during World War II. This unique training led to remarkable success in battle.

The Force deployed to Italy in 1943. The first mission was to capture two peaks on the German Winter Line. This line had proven unbreakable and defeated massive Allied attacks. The road to liberate Rome led straight through this line. General Eisenhower needed to find a way to blast through. He chose the First Special Service Force.

The Force attacked the German line using what both Allied and Axis forces thought was an impossible route—the north face. In the dead of winter. In the middle of the night. Needless to say, they surprised the German forces on Monte la Difensa. Over the next 46 days, the Force defeated the fortified German Winter Line. The victory came at a devastating price. The Force lost 1,300 men out of a total of 1,800.

The First Special Service Force then moved to the Anzio-Nettmo beachhead. For 99 days, the Force battled the infamous German Hermann Goering Division. The Force pushed the Germans back, liberating Italian villages as they moved north toward Rome. On June 4, 1944, members of the Force routed German Forces guarding the eight bridges leading into Rome. Their advance cleared the way for other Allied forces to liberate Rome.

The Force then turned to the Îles d'Hyères, islands in southern France. Their amphibious assault surprised the Nazi occupiers and led to the capture of four Nazi forts. The Black Devil Brigade continued to the mainland where they hunted down the retreating German Eighth Army. The Force drove eastward in 15 weeks of battle to the Franco-Italian border, liberating the towns of Grasse, Villeneuve-Loubet, Sospel and Castillon in southern France.

The Force deactivated on December 5, 1944 in southern France. The remainder of the war would be fought by large-scale armies, not covert units like the First Special Service Force.

During the war, the Force suffered 2,314 casualties, equating to an astounding 134 percent of its combat strength. It captured over 30,000 prisoners, won five U.S. campaign stars and eight Canadian battle honors. It never failed a mission. Today, only 230 of these brave soldiers remain to tell the tales of their remarkable service.

As a testament to the unwavering camaraderie of the Force, the First Special Service Force Association was formed and continues to have reunions every year. They will be honoring the 70th anniversary of the creation of the Force at their reunion next year. With every passing day we lose more of these brave warriors, and it is crucial that we honor them now.

We owe the liberty we enjoy today to the brave men of the Black Devil Brigade. So many of us indebted to so few. Fortunately for our great Nation, the legacy of the First Special Service Force lives on. The Canadian Special Operations Regiment and the Special Forces of the United States trace their lineage back to the First Special Service Force.

It is time to award the First Special Service Force the Congressional Gold Medal. I strongly urge my colleagues to cosponsor this bill to honor these American heroes with the recognition and gratitude they have earned.

By Mr. REED (for himself, Ms. AYOTTE, Mr. KERRY, Mrs. SHAHEEN, Mr. WHITEHOUSE, Mr. BROWN of Massachusetts, Mr. LEAHY, and Mr. BLUMENTHAL):

S. 1465. A bill to authorize a pilot program on enhancements of Department of Defense efforts on mental health in the National Guard and Reserves through community partnerships, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Armed Services.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, today I am pleased to introduce the Joining Forces for Military Mental Health Act with my colleagues Senators AYOTTE, KERRY, SHAHEEN, SCOTT BROWN, WHITEHOUSE, LEAHY, and BLUMENTHAL.

This legislation seeks to improve the coordination of research, treatment, education and outreach of mental health, substance use disorders, and traumatic brain injury, TBI, among members of the National Guard and Reserve and their families.

These service members often return from a tour of duty and transition into civilian life far from military bases and without easy access to the care they might need, which can make transitioning back into family life and careers more difficult. Those who do seek care in their community may not always receive the most appropriate and effective treatment.

The Joining Forces for Military Mental Health Act would authorize the Secretary of Defense to provide grants to community partners that engage in research, treatment, education, and outreach. This will help ensure that every member of the military receives innovative and effective treatments and the most updated information about mental illness, substance abuse, and TBI connected with military service.

This type of coordination of research, treatment, education, and outreach, and collaboration with community partners could improve the health outcomes of members of the National Guard and Reserve and their families. This bipartisan legislation has been endorsed by the National Guard Association of the United States, and the Red Sox Foundation and others have already shown this type of coordination to be effective in providing quality care. I urge my colleagues to take a close look at this legislation and join me in supporting this effort to improve the mental health care that members of the National Guard and Reserve and their families receive in the community.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the text of the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 1465

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,
