

COMMENDING PATRICIA MOULTON
POWDEN AND SUE DAVENPORT

• Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, I rise to commend the service of Patricia Moulton Powden and Sue Davenport, two New Englanders who are ending their terms on the Board of Directors for the Northeast-Midwest Institute. Both have provided exceptional service to the Institute, and in the process helped to improve our region's economic development and environmental quality. The Northeast-Midwest Institute provides policy analysis for the bipartisan Northeast-Midwest Senate Coalition, which I co-chair with Senator Daniel Patrick MOYNIHAN from New York.

Patricia Moulton Powden is a fellow Vermonter who has served for the past 4 years as Treasurer of the Northeast-Midwest Institute's Board of Directors. In that capacity, she provided careful oversight and helped the group's finances improve significantly. Within Vermont, Patricia is executive director of the Springfield Regional Development Corporation. She also has served as Commissioner of Economic Development for the State of Vermont and Director of the St. Johnsbury Area Economic Development Office.

Sue Davenport has performed a variety of public service activities throughout New England. Currently, she is Executive Director of the Spurwink Schools-New Hampshire, which provide residential/day treatment programs for youngsters with emotional and behavioral handicaps, and their families. She has served as Commissioner of mental health and mental retardation for the State of Maine; adjunct faculty member at Suffolk University; Regional Director of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services; and Acting Director of HHS's Regional Administrative Support Center.

Mr. President, I again want to thank these distinguished New Englanders for their leadership on the Northeast-Midwest Institute's Board of Directors. They have provided valued service and helped increase that organization's reputation and effectiveness.●

IN HONOR OF HEAD START
AWARENESS MONTH

• Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I rise today to join with thousands of Americans who this month are celebrating Head Start Awareness Month.

There are few federal programs like Head Start. Since its creation in 1965, this marvelous program has provided comprehensive education, health, social and nutritional services to over 17 million young children and their families. Today, over 835,000 children are involved in Head Start, benefitting from the commitment of nearly 170,000 staff people and just over 2,000 Head Start agencies nationwide.

Head Start is clearly much more than a program. It is a community organized around the principle that we must together take care of our young children. Head Start brings together parents, teachers and others in the community to support young children and meet their needs. Sometimes that means health screenings and eye glasses; other times it means linking a parent up with job training services. The actions are diverse but the effects are the same—enriching and improving the child's life.

Next year, we will celebrate the 35th anniversary of this powerful program. And there is clearly much to celebrate. The anniversary will also provide us with an appropriate opportunity to reflect on Head Start and consider how to continue to promote, improve and expand this crucial program. In some ways, we began this process last year with the enactment of the 1998 Head Start reauthorization bill. This legislation increased support for additional staff training and professional development, authorized further research into the long term benefits of Head Start, improved program accountability measures, and expanded Early Head Start to serve more infants and toddlers, laying a strong foundation for Head Start in the next century.

However, I believe there remains unfinished business with Head Start. Most notably, the program still serves just 40 percent of those eligible. The President has proposed the laudable goal of serving one million children by 2002—but I think we must do more. We must also look to Head Start for further models of how to serve young children. For the last 35 years, the program has been a laboratory for the development of practices that are now commonplace in child care and preschool programs across the country. We must continue to build on the success of Head Start to better serve Head Start children as well as other young children.

One of our key partners in this effort is the National Head Start Association (NHSA). This organization is the voice of Head Start, representing parents, children and staff. Beyond being an active advocate for young children and Head Start, NHSA is focused on a strong and vibrant future for Head Start, providing technical assistance, professional development opportunities, training tools and policy guidance to programs across the country. I am honored to join with NHSA and all in the Head Start community to celebrate Head Start Awareness Month—October 1999.●
