

she has worked long and hard on these issues and that it is her work and her dedication that is responsible for the inclusion of the children's provisions in the homeland security bill.

I would further say to my friend from California that while additional reforms may be warranted, the legislation before us today was primarily a structural bill, not a policy bill. That fact prevented the consideration of some of the reforms she has championed from being included in this legislation.

I pledged to work with her in the 108th Congress to help fashion legislation that could address some of the issues that had to be left out of this measure.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. I thank the Senator from Arizona. You may be interested to know that I first became involved in this issue when I heard about a young 15-year old Chinese girl who stood before a U.S. immigration court facing deportation proceedings. She had found her way to the United States as a stowaway in a container ship captured off of Guam, hoping to escape the repression she had experienced in her home country.

Although she had committed no crime, the INS sent her to a Portland jail, where she languished for seven months. When the INS brought her before an immigration judge, she stood before him confused, not understanding the proceedings against her. Tears streamed down her face, yet she could not wipe them away because her hands were handcuffed and chained to her waist.

While the young girl eventually received asylum in our country, she unnecessarily faced an ordeal no child should bear under our immigration system. This young Chinese girl represents only one of 5,000 foreign-born children who, without parents or legal guardians to protect them, are discovered in the United States each year in need of protection.

So you see, this issue calls for clearer policy direction from Congress. I thank my friend and look forward to working with him in the beginning of the 108th Congress.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, the reorganization of our homeland security efforts is necessary if we are to achieve a higher level of safety for American citizens.

The bill before us improves our security by combining into a single department the federal agencies and programs that today have a role in providing homeland security. Those organizations comprise some 170,000 people. Bringing them together under a single reorganized department will enable us to improve coordination of the Government's efforts to defend the United States against terrorist attacks.

By creating the cabinet-level position of Secretary of Homeland Security, the bill ensures there will be a leader of this effort, with the appropriate authority and responsibility to carry out that mission.

The creation of a Border and Transportation Security Directorate—bringing together the Immigration and Naturalization Service from the Justice Department, the U.S. Customs Service from the Treasury Department, and the newly created Transportation Security Administration—will make a single entity responsible for securing our border and transportation systems and preventing the entry of terrorists into our country.

The Coast Guard, which also plays an important role in securing our borders, will move from the Department of Transportation to the Department of Homeland Security. By maintaining the Coast Guard as an independent agency reporting directly to the Secretary of Homeland Security, this bill ensures the Coast Guard will have the resources and advocacy it needs to conduct its important security missions as well as its other missions, such as search-and-rescue and boating safety.

This legislation also creates a Directorate of Emergency Preparedness and Response, which will coordinate the federal government's response to terrorist attacks and major disasters. Combining all the Federal Government's emergency response efforts into a single entity will improve the Government's coordination with state and local entities in preparing for and responding to terrorist attacks.

The need for this reorganization is critical to our national security. Its scope is necessarily quite extensive. If this effort is to be effective, the President must have the flexibility to adapt the new department as needed to carry out its mission. This bill provides him the management flexibility he needs while protecting the rights of the Federal workers who will serve in the new department.

This bill represents to most extensive reorganization of the Federal Government in over 50 years. By taking resources from existing departments and agencies and placing them in a new organization, it has required a very difficult balancing of competing interests and views. The success of those efforts is a tribute to those who have worked so hard to bring this legislation about.

The President in particular deserves praise for bringing together a wide variety of interests and addressing a variety of concerns about the new department. Here in the Senate, Senator THOMPSON, the ranking member of the Governmental Affairs Committee and one of the sponsors of the compromise proposal before us now, deserves great credit for his efforts to ensure this legislation was both effective and fair. Senator LIEBERMAN, the chairman of the Governmental Affairs Committee, was one of the first to identify the need for this department and to call for its creation, and he should be commended for his efforts as well.

The bill before us is the beginning, not the end, of our efforts to adapt to the new threats we face. After the Department of Homeland Security is created, we may find that other changes will be needed, but this legislation is a very important step to ensuring that our nation, our homeland, and our citizens, are protected to the fullest extent possible from the new and dangerous threats that confront us.

I support this effort and I urge all Senators to vote for it.

Let's get on with it.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

SEC. 908. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

There are authorized to be appropriated to the Secretary of Transportation such sums as may be necessary to carry out this title, including the making of grants under section 412 of title 23, United States Code, as added by section 906.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, I appreciate the fact that we have now passed an air cargo security bill that I think will move the ball a long way down the road toward ensuring the safety of the traveling public and our aviation industry.

Since the 9/11 terrorist attacks, we have spent a tremendous amount of time, effort, and resources improving our passenger aviation security system. In fact, tomorrow we have a very important deadline that will be met. All of the airport screeners in our country will be Federal employees who have met a series of stringent requirements, undergone mandatory training, and passed performance and written examinations.

I am proud of the work we have done in this area, but I am also concerned that we have been neglecting other modes of transportation as we continue to focus on passenger aircraft. 1 year ago, Congress created the Transportation Security Administration to implement and oversee security on our highways, in our airports, on trains, and in our ports. However, until now, we only gave to the TSA the tools to do the job with respect to passenger aviation security.

Last week, we finally passed the port security bill. Now we need to take another step toward transportation security. While I am confident that our efforts have dramatically improved aviation security, we have not closed all the loopholes in our air cargo operations. This issue must be addressed.

Twenty-two percent of all air cargo in the United States is carried on passenger flights, but only a tiny percentage of this cargo is inspected. There is no point to carefully screening every piece of luggage if the cargo placed aboard the same flight is not inspected at all. That is why I introduced the Air Cargo Security Act with my friend from California, Senator DIANNE FEINSTEIN. We reasoned it was pointless to require air passengers to wait in long security lines, undergo rigorous searches, which all of us have certainly had the privilege of suffering through, if we then allow packages to travel on the very same flight with no inspections whatsoever. Ignoring this problem could be an invitation to disaster.

My legislation was the subject of a closed-door hearing of the Aviation Subcommittee. Without going into details, it was apparent there are significant vulnerabilities in our existing system of air cargo security. The Transportation Security Administration is doing the best it can with limited resources. But clearly, legislation is required.

I modified the bill in response to those weaknesses and the recommendations made by the Transportation Security Administration, as well as the Department of Transportation Inspector General.

This bill was unanimously passed by the Commerce Committee in September as part of a larger package of aviation security measures. Some of these provisions made their way into the homeland security compromise draft, but air cargo security is too important to simply wait until next year.

The bill before us will establish a more reliable and accountable known shipper program, with frequent inspections of shipping facilities, tamper-proof identification cards for employees, and an accessible shipper database.

For the first time, the Transportation Security Administration will have the power to revoke the license of a shipper or freight forwarder whose practices are unsound or who has engaged in illegal activity.

The bill also requires the Transportation Security Administration to conduct regular inspections of foreign shipping facilities. Freight forwarders will have to submit to random inspections, and the TSA must also implement a training program for cargo professionals. All cargo facilities must have an improved security plan.

While we tighten these rules and procedures, we must be careful not to cause any economic damage to an airline industry that is already in dire straits. It is critical that the measures we impose allow both passenger and cargo carriers to compete on an equal footing. We drafted this bill in consultation with air cargo carriers and the airlines. I am pleased that we have gained their support, because it is important we have the regulators and the aviation industry working together to make the most seamless security system possible, not only in our country but throughout the world.

I also want to point out that the bill before us would accomplish several other goals. These provisions have all been approved by the Commerce Committee, and I thank Senators HOLLINGS and MCCAIN for their leadership.

The bill reauthorizes the National Transportation Safety Board through fiscal year 2005. I was proud to serve as vice chair of the National Transportation Safety Board before I came to the Senate. This agency investigates civil aviation accidents and significant incidents in other modes of transportation: railroad, highway, marine, and pipeline. The NTSB also issues safety recommendations aimed at preventing future accidents. This reauthorization also strengthens performance requirements for booster seats for children weighing more than 50 pounds. The NTSB's important work is completed on a very reasonable budget. I am pleased to support this reauthorization bill.

The bill before us also makes technical corrections to last year's Aviation and Transportation Security Act. It allows TSA to use biometric identification technologies such as retina scans and fingerprints to assist in aviation security. It defines circumvention of airport security as a Federal crime. It authorizes a study on blast-resistant cargo containers, and it strengthens security at flight schools. These necessary measures fine-tune the comprehensive security legislation we passed last year. I am pleased we have cleared this legislation, and I urge my colleagues in the House to follow suit.

Mr. President, I would make a parliamentary inquiry. Am I correct in concluding that all of the necessary steps and procedures have occurred to assure that this bill has been passed and that Senate action on S. 2949 is now complete?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

Ms. HUTCHISON. I thank the Chair.

I appreciate the cooperation of my colleagues. I thank Senator REID for helping me in this wrap-up. I know he has not yet come to the floor, but I know that he helped us in clearing this bill. This bill has been cleared by unanimous consent. It is a very important step in securing our homeland. We have taken great strides to secure our airports and the passenger screening is quite thorough. Everybody has to smile when you say that, because anyone who has flown in America in the last 6 months has certainly been subjected to a lot of scrutiny. I have certainly been frisked. I have had my shoes taken off, all of those things that drive people crazy. But the bottom line is, we do have a safer system. We got the wake-up call on 9/11 of 2001. We have taken extraordinary steps to secure our country and our aviation system. Anyone who says our system is not safer today than it was on September 10 of 2001 either has not flown or is being disingenuous.

I would like to thank Admiral Loy at the Transportation Security Administration, and certainly Secretary Mineta and President Bush for their strong leadership in homeland and transportation security. We are going to do everything we can to make sure our people are safe.

The port security bill was a huge step in the right direction. I have one of the largest petrochemical complexes in the world in Houston, TX. I want to make sure they had all the authority and resources they need to secure that port. In fact, just this week, I talked to the people from the Port of Houston, and they are taking steps on their own. We need to help them at the Federal level to improve security, but they are not waiting for us to act. They know the importance of this issue because they are on the front lines, hearing of new threats from Osama bin Laden just recently. So they are battening down the hatches.

We are going to do the same thing with air cargo in the bill we just passed. If the House does come back this year, I will urge my colleagues in the House to look at this bill and try to work with us to make sure the belly of the airplane is just as safe as the passenger cabin is today. All of us want that to happen. I appreciate everybody's cooperation in passing this very important piece of legislation. Mr. President, I look forward to chairing the Aviation Subcommittee next year, working with Senator ROCKEFELLER, my ranking member, with whom I have had a great working relationship. We have passed the aviation security measure that is the law today. We worked together to pass the port security bill.

Senator ROCKEFELLER and I have a great vision for what we can do in aviation to make our system not only secure and safe for the traveling public, but also economically viable. Without an aviation industry, this country would lose in commerce and in the freedom of our people to travel. Our country is vast and we need aviation. I am looking forward to chairing that Subcommittee with Senator ROCKEFELLER and working to try to make sure that we maintain an economically viable aviation industry that is safe and secure for the traveling public, and for the goods that comprise our commerce.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, I rise to speak on S. 2949, the Aviation Security Improvement Act. This bill builds and improves upon work that began last year when Congress passed the Aviation and Transportation Security Act, ATSA, P.L. 107-71. During the 10 months since that law's enactment, there has been a significant change in the way aviation security is handled. However, there is a long way to go until we achieve all our aviation security goals. I believe the bill before us would make many positive steps in the continuing effort to protect the nation's air transportation system. This bill also contains the text of S. 2950, the National Transportation Safety Board Reauthorization.

I want to begin by commending Senators HUTCHISON and SNOWE for their work on the air cargo security issue addressed in this legislation. The cargo provisions flow directly from their bills and would bolster an aspect of aviation security that was not addressed in great detail in last year's law. This is one area in which we can and should be proactive to get ahead of potential problems or vulnerabilities.

There is a particular issue in this bill that I want to discuss briefly. In last year's security bill, we mandated that airport screeners had to be U.S. citizens. While imposing that requirement was an understandable impulse, it had some negative ramifications that were not clear at the time. For example, American Samoans are not now eligible to be screeners because they are considered nationals, not citizens.

S. 2949 includes a provision to allow nationals of the U.S., honorably discharged veterans of the U.S. military, and lawful permanent residents who were employed as airport security screeners at the time of ATSA's enactment, to be eligible to compete for jobs as federal security screeners. The provision would not require that these individuals be hired, but give TSA the discretion to hire them if they meet all the other statutory requirements concerning the hiring of screeners. This is a fair and reasonable expansion of the existing provision.

A similar provision was added to the Homeland Security bill. However, the provision in the Homeland Security bill only expands the definition to include U.S. nationals. It would still exclude an important segment of the population—legal permanent residents. LPRs as they are known, can join the military and risk giving up their lives fighting for our country. Yet, to date, they cannot be hired as security screeners. This is wrong, and we should correct it now.

In addition, S. 2949 would reauthorize the National Transportation Safety Board. The NTSB is an independent Federal agency charged with investigating every civil aviation accident in the United States. It also investigates significant accidents in the other modes of transportation—railroad, highway, marine, and pipeline—and issuing safety recommendations intended to prevent future accidents. We are all aware of the important role the NTSB plays in the safety of our transportation system, and it is important that we move ahead with this reauthorizing legislation.

A key element of this bill involves authorization for the NTSB's new Training Academy, which will be the centerpiece of its teaching and training of transportation accident investigators worldwide. It also will provide state-of-the-art classrooms and laboratory space for accident investigation. This is especially important with the advent of new technology that is being used to build, fuel, and more all modes of transportation.

The legislation also would streamline the NTSB's procurement process during accident investigations and allow the Board to transfer its family assistance responsibilities to any Federal agency that takes over an investigation, such as the FBI, provided that the other agency is willing and able to handle those duties. Finally the bill would reauthorize the NTSB's funding for its day to day activities.

The importance of the agency is well known to all. I urge the support of this bill.

THE CONFIRMATION OF MICHAEL MCCONNELL TO THE 10TH CIRCUIT

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, last Friday, the Senate approved the nomination of Michael McConnell to the United States Court of Appeals for the Tenth Circuit. As a professor, first at the University of Chicago, and then at the University of Utah, Mr. McConnell has been a strong voice for reexamining First Amendment jurisprudence of Free Exercise Clause and the Establishment Clause. He has expressed strong personal opposition to abortion to Roe v. Wade, to the clinic access law. He has testified before the Congress against the Violence Against Women Act on the grounds that it was unconstitutional.

Each of these issues was explored to some degree at his hearing before the Judiciary Committee and in follow up written questions. No one doubts that Professor McConnell is personable and intelligent. No one doubts that he is an outstanding and provocative professor. I see why so many of his law professor colleagues like him and have endorsed his nomination. But the Judiciary Committee also received letters from hundreds of law professors reminding us that the burden of persuasion on lifetime judicial appointments should be on the nominee, as well as a recent letter signed by hundreds of law professors opposing confirmation of Professor McConnell.

The question I was left with after his nomination hearing was whether we had witnessed another confirmation conversion. Stated another way, I remain very concerned that Professor McConnell may turn out to be an activist on the 10th Circuit.

For instance, I still have a hard time reading his writing on the actions of Federal District Court Judge John Sprizzo in acquitting abortion protesters as anything other than praise for the extra-legal behavior of both the defendants and the judge. Even though Professor McConnell has now been confirmed, I continue to be concerned that he appeared to commend a judge and regard him as a hero for not following the law.

I find his responses regarding the Violence Against Women Act convenient.

I see his refusal to take responsibility for his harsh criticism of the Supreme Court's decision in the Bob Jones case as an attempt to distance himself from his prior approval of the ability of religious institutions to discriminate on the basis of race, even if they are receiving benefits from the Government.

At his hearing, and in follow-up written questions, Professor McConnell sought to assure us that he understands the difference between his role as a teacher and advocate and his future role as a judge. He assured us that he respects the doctrine of stare decisis, and that as a Federal appeals court judge, he will be bound to follow Supreme Court precedent.

Although many of President Clinton's nominees who assured the Senate of these same things when they were nominated were discredited and not considered, this nomination has moved forward and been approved.

I reluctantly supported this nomination to the 10th Circuit based on Professor McConnell's assurances. I trust that he will not seek to undermine women's reproductive rights derived from the Constitution and articulated in Roe v. Wade. I trust that as an appeals court judge he will divorce his personal views on abortion and on racial discrimination in religious institutions from his decisions as a judge, and that he will act to uphold existing law. I trust that he will not seek to circumvent the doctrine of stare decisis and that he will not work to change the law through activism on the bench.

There are already admirers who predict that Professor McConnell is destined for a short stop at the 10th Circuit on the way to a Supreme Court nomination. I do not speculate about such things. Professor McConnell has yet to create a record on the 10th Circuit. I mention it only to note that no one should confuse my support of Professor McConnell's nomination to the 10th Circuit as an endorsement or approval for any other position.

IN REMEMBRANCE OF PAUL WELLSTONE

Ms. SNOWE. Mr. President, like all of my colleagues, I was shocked and deeply saddened by the tragic accident that claimed the life of Senator Wellstone, his wife Sheila, their daughter Marcia, two pilots, and three members of Paul's staff. My heart goes out to the families and they will remain in my thoughts and prayers.

It was always a privilege working with Senator Wellstone. In fact, one of the last images I have of him was in the final days of the session, when I encountered him coming up the aisle in the Senate Chamber after a vote with his typical boundless energy, warm smile, and friendly greeting. He was a compassionate, honorable man—and it was obvious to all of us that, together, Paul and Sheila made an extraordinary and loving team.

As a public servant, Senator Wellstone's most enduring legacy will surely be his career of conscience in elective office. With his unwavering passion and integrity, he was highly respected and will be long remembered.

With both of us hailing from northern border States, we shared the same perspective on a number of issues such as the reimportation of prescription drugs, and we worked together over the years to ensure the critical low-income energy program, LIHEAP, would be there for the people of Maine and Minnesota.

I was proud to serve with him on the Small Business Committee where I saw his diligence and tenaciousness firsthand, and to work with him on issues of importance to our veterans such as a bill establishing July 16 as a National Day of Remembrance for Atomic Veterans, as well as a measure providing for increases in veterans spending. I was also pleased to help champion his and Senator DOMENICI's legislation to create mental health parity—a perfect illustration of his compassion and the causes for which he felt duty-bound to fight.

Indeed, all of us and, most importantly, the people of Minnesota could count on Paul to stand up for his deeply held beliefs, speaking always from
