We need special outreach efforts dedicated to bringing new business skills and financial resources to Native-American communities. But these efforts have fallen victim to the administration's budget priorities. For the second year in a row, the administration has proposed to eliminate all funding for Native-American business outreach.

The list of small business programs on the chopping block is too long to mention here. Cumulatively, the SBA has already seen its resources reduced by this administration by 25 percent, giving it the unfortunate distinction of being the most cut of all 26 Federal agencies. This, to me, does not demonstrate a commitment to economic development in job creation. We need to restore adequate funding to the SBA.

While the SBA's budget has suffered the deepest cuts under the administration, it is not the only agency that has seen its small business and rural development programs cut. The Treasury Department oversees a fund that provides capital to community development financial institutions, or CDFIs. These are specialized private sector institutions that provide financial products and services to people and communities underserved by traditional financial markets.

The Treasury Department estimates that every dollar it invests in a CDFI leverages 12 non-Federal or private sector dollars.

There are 13 CDFIs in South Dakota, and they do enormous good. The Lakota Fund is one that operates on the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation. The two counties that make up the reservation are the twenty-sixth and second poorest counties in America. Few areas need economic development as badly as Pine Ridge.

When the Lakota Fund began lending in 1986, there were 40 businesses on the reservation, and most of them were owned by nontribal members. Today, thanks in large measure to the financial and technical assistance delivered by the Lakota Fund, Pine Ridge has nearly 100 businesses, and many of them are owned by members of the Oglala Sioux Tribe.

If the more than 800 CDFIs around the United States had more funds to lend, there is no telling how much good they could achieve. But instead of helping CDFIs meet the growing demand for their services, the administration has underfunded them dramatically. This year, like last year, it requested only three-fifths of what the CDFIs received in 2002.

The President's proposed budget cuts also provide cuts in the 2002 Farm Bill. Democrats worked alongside Republicans to establish new initiatives under the Department of Agriculture to bring new jobs and opportunities to rural communities. When the President signed the Farm Bill into law, many people believed those programs would become a reality. I believed the President when he expressed his support for those programs with the stroke of his pen. But since then, many of these programs have languished due to inaction or even opposition by the White House.

From my State and several neighboring States, including Iowa, Minnesota, Nebraska, and North Dakota, the establishment of a Northern Great Plains Regional Authority was one of the most exciting features of the Farm Bill. This authority was modeled on the successful Appalachian Regional Commission, which demonstrated the power of a regional approach to economic development.

Unfortunately, nearly 3 years after its creation, the Northern Great Plains Regional Authority has yet to fulfill even a fraction of its promise, in large part because the administration has not fulfilled the responsibilities to the Authority. The administration failed to appoint Federal and tribal cochairs to lead the Authority, and it has failed to support any funding for the Authority's activities.

Other programs in the Farm Bill are also neglected. The Rural Business Investment Program, which is supposed to provide millions of dollars to private companies willing to invest and leverage that money in rural areas, has not been implemented even though the Farm Bill was enacted over 2 years ago.

The same goes for the Rural Strategic Investment Program which was designed to help rural areas develop plans to attract new investment.

And the list of underfunded programs goes on and on. They include cuts to firefighter assistance grants, coupled with proposed changes in the eligibility criteria to favor urban areas; cuts in assistance for rural hospitals, where costs are rising fast—many rural hospitals are already in danger of having to close their doors; cuts to USDA community facility loans, which help finance construction of fire halls, clinics, daycare centers, senior centers, and critical community facilities; cuts to rural housing loans; cuts to rural electric contribution and telecommunication programs.

It is hard to understand how we can slash and eliminate programs that are designed specifically to strengthen the economy of rural America and then claim to be champions of rural communities and small business.

Unfortunately, the President's two-word solution to the economic struggles of rural America is the same two-word answer he offers on virtually every other problem: tax cuts. In the face of exploding deficits and rising health care costs that threaten the long-term sustainability of our economy, the President continues to insist on the wrong kinds of tax cuts.

Many of us support tax cuts if they are smart, if they are targeted, if they are fair, if they are affordable. The right kinds of tax cuts can help stimulate the economy during times of economic distress.

That is why some of us introduced S. 2245 to create a small business health tax credit that would reduce the burden of health costs on small business and enable them to retain and hire more workers. That is also why we worked to reach a compromise on the estate tax that would exempt all but the very richest Americans and fully exempt farms, ranches, and small businesses that parents pass on to their children.

But tax cuts cannot be our only weapon in the battle against rural poverty. Independent analysis shows the vast majority of small businesses receive little or no benefit from the President's tax cuts.

And let us not forget that these cuts have a cost, or as Chairman Greenspan put it, "The free lunch has still to be invented."

In order to help finance his tax cuts, the President has proposed cutting or eliminating program after program designed to help small business and residents of rural America.

If the choice is between ruinously expensive tax cuts that overwhelmingly benefit the wealthiest Americans and proven, cost-effective, and desperately needed economic development programs for rural America, I think the answer should be clear. We should stick with what works. We should invest in the targeted, proven solutions we know will bring new prosperity to Main Street, not just to Wall Street.

We need to continue to support programs designed to improve the quality of life in rural America, and we need to uphold our common commitment to ensuring that those programs succeed.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

RESERVATION OF LEADER TIME

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, the leadership time is reserved.

MORNING BUSINESS

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, there will now be a period for the transaction of morning business for up to 60 minutes, with the first half of the time under the control of the Democratic leader or his designee and the second half of the time under the control of the majority leader or his designee.

The Senator from Alaska.

ORDER OF PROCEDURE

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I be recognized to speak in morning business, to be followed by Senator MURKOWSKI, provided that following our remarks, the Democratic time be extended by an equal amount of time that we use.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection?

The Senator from Nevada.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I would just like to say to my Democratic colleagues, the reason we are doing this is