HONORING JACK AND CARTER
HARDESTY

HON. FRANK R. WOLF

OF VIRGINIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, November 16, 2004

Mr. WOLF. Mr. Speaker, it is my pleasure to draw the attention of the House to a noble couple on the occasion of the dedication of the Jack and Carter Hardesty Bridge in Clarke County, VA. The Hardestys have been a vital part of the Clarke County community for over half a century, and now their name will be honored and associated with the bridge over U.S. Route 340 which crosses the Norfolk Southern Railroad line about a mile from the West Virginia border.

State Senator Russ Potts sponsored the legislation in the Virginia General Assembly to dedicate the bridge in their name. I was honored to join him; Virginia Governor Mark Warner; the Honorable Al Smith, former member of the Virginia House of Delegates; the Honorable Jack Marsh, former Virginia Congressman and former Secretary of the Army; members of the Hardesty family and their friends and neighbors at the dedication ceremony and unveiling of the bridge marker on October 4. The Clarke County High School Band and school Concert Choir provided music for the event.

Carter, who passed away last year, was a special woman. She sent literally hundreds of cards each year to county residents that she personally picked out and wrote notes in for every occasion. These cards were often just pick-me-ups for friends that were down. Apparently, even a flat tire didn't escape her notice. The cards she sent made her an irreplaceable part of the community that is dearly missed.

Carter was also an active member of the Crums United Methodist Church. She spent 25 years teaching numerous Sunday school classes. Pastor Sandra Stamey of Crums UMC gave the invocation at the dedication ceremony.

However, I remember Carter best for her service at the Lord's Acre Booth at the Clarke County Fair. She was cochairman of the booth.

Carter was only one half of this dynamic duo. A dairy farmer by profession, Jack has served Clarke County as a member of the board of supervisors and his long list of community, civic, and public service activities is unparalleled. We all share with him and his family in the grief of Carter's loss. She left a great legacy behind for the husband and family and community that she dearly loved.

I want to share with our colleagues an article about the dedication ceremony from The Winchester Star.

CEREMONY CELEBRATES HARDESTY INFLUENCE
(By Jessica Sabbath)

BERRYVILLE.—Gov. Mark R. Warner visited Clarke County Monday to honor a husband known for his lifelong service to the county and a wife known for her heartfelt cards.

More than 200 people joined the governor, area politicians, and the extended Hardesty family at the dedication of a county bridge to John D. "Jack" Hardesty and his late wife, Carter.

The bridge, on U.S. 340, crosses over the Norfolk Southern Railroad line about a mile from the West Virginia border.

The couple is part of eight generations of Hardestys that have been prominent in the county. Speakers praised the couple for the couple's commitment to faith, family, and the county.

"Jack Hardesty and his family represent not only the best of public service, but the best of what it means to be a Virginian," Warner said against the backdrop of rolling green hills.

The ceremony was held at Oakland Orchard by state Sen. H. Russell Potts Jr., R-Winchester, and the Virginia Department of Transportation.

It wasn't the first time a Hardesty family ceremony brought the governor to Clarke County. In March 2002, Warner declared Virginia Agriculture Week at Harvue Farms, the dairy farm Jack Hardesty and his father established in 1949.

Jack Hardesty served on the county Board of Supervisors for 30 years, and was its chairman for 18 years.

He was named "Dairyman of the Year" in 1992 and has been president of the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association for the past five years. He served five gubernatorial appointments and has been on the board of the Bank of Clarke County for 40 years.

Carter Hardesty, who died last October, was known as the "Card Lady" of Clarke County. She sent out between 15 and 20 cards each week to county residents for just about any occasion.

During the ceremony, Potts, who sponsored the legislation in the Virginia General Assembly to dedicate the bridge, held up a stack of cards he had received from Carter Hardesty.

"She would even send a card out when somebody's car broke down," Potts said.

Carter Hardesty taught Sunday School at Crums United Methodist Church for 25 years. She was the co-chair of the Lord's Acre booth in the Clarke County Fair for 35 years.

U.S. Rep. Frank R. Wolf, R-10th, praised the couple's service to the county and family.

"They have played a vital part of this community in a unique way," Wolf said, adding he hopes future generations of Hardestys would carry on the tradition.

Danny Hardesty, grandson of Jack Hardesty and a senior at Clarke County High School, said the ceremony and his grandfather's service had done just that.

"He laid down the roadwork for us all to follow," Danny said.

The governor made a late, but rather striking entrance. A few minutes into the ceremony, a helicopter carrying the governor approached while the Clarke County High School Band played "The Star Spangled Banner."

A mix-up in the location of the helicopter caused the governor to make a last-minute sprint to Richmond International Airport to catch a flight into Winchester.

There, Warner jumped on the helicopter that flew him into Clarke.

"I was not trying to interfere with the band's wonderful rendition," Warner said at the dedication. "Neither sleet, nor rain, nor snow, nor hail nor misplaced helicopter could keep me away." Warner recalled receiving a card from Carter Hardesty when he began his term and found the state's budget in worse-than-expected shape.

"Don't worry, Mark," Warner recalled the card saying. "You'll get through it all right."

Potts, Wolf, former Del. Alson H. Smith Jr., former Congressman and former Secretary of the U.S. Army John O. Marsh all spoke at the event, held on a warm and sunny fall day.

"My wife arranged the weather," Jack Hardesty told the crowd. "I know Carter's looking down and enjoying this."

During an emotional high point of the ceremony, tears welled in the eyes of the family and many members of the audience as Alexandra Masters, a junior at Clarke County High School, sang pop singer Sarah McLachlan's "Angel."

The Hardesty family stood with politicians as Warner and Jack Hardesty unveiled a green highway sign that read "Jack and Carter Hardesty Bridge."

Potts said it would be fitting that after crossing over the Virginia border, people would first see the bridge.

"The bridge that represents that 'Highway to Heaven' that the Hardestys tried to make Clarke County," Potts said.
