

necessary and took responsibility when things didn't go the team's way. No one ever heard an excuse from Jerry Sloan.

Mr. President, I have known Jerry Sloan for a number of years. Quite simply, he is a class act. I think you have to spend some time in Utah to know just what Jerry Sloan has meant to our community. I want thank Jerry for all he has done for the State of Utah, and I wish him and his family the best of luck in all their future endeavors.

REMEMBERING GIUSEPPE GARIBALDI

Mr. ENZI. Mr. President, I rise today to talk about the American dream and honoring those who have not only embodied a pioneering spirit, but more specifically, one individual who inspired two nations through his passionate leadership, and through his dedication to family and pride in tradition.

Italian-American Giuseppe Garibaldi lived and fought for the dream of creating his own destiny. All too often today we give little thought to the freedom of deciding who we are, to deciding what we want to be even how and where we raise a family and practice our faith. However, 150 years ago, these decisions meant the world to Mr. Garibaldi.

Giuseppe Garibaldi was born in Nice, Italy, on July 4, 1807. In his early twenties, Mr. Garibaldi continued his family's coastal trade business and answered a call of duty to enlist in the military. At the age of 25, Garibaldi's budding leadership was recognized and he was commissioned as a merchant marine captain.

Throughout Central and South America, he fought in independence struggles leading the Italian Legion. His success earned him the title "Hero of Two Worlds" from the people of Italy and Uruguay. Garibaldi continued to foster his passionate beliefs and soon after leaving South America began learning English and applied for citizenship in America. His request was granted and Garibaldi settled in New York among other notable Italian minds of the time. Not only did he become a community leader for Italian Americans living in Staten Island, he encouraged fellow immigrants to work hard for their dreams and to create true communities with their neighbors, while still embracing family and traditions from Italy.

After his time living in the United States, Garibaldi was called upon again to be a military leader. He led the troops at Risorgimento that fought to unite a divided Italy and succeeded in their mission in 1861. This man's great works and leadership helped shift Italy from a dynastic tyranny to a time of political self-determination.

Because of this extraordinary accomplishment, President Abraham Lincoln offered Garibaldi a position as Major General of the Union Army. Although Garibaldi declined the impressive commission, the 39th New York Infantry was still known afterward as "The Garibaldi Guard"—where Italian-Americans fought alongside fellow soldiers to protect the America they loved.

Giuseppe Garibaldi was not just a soldier though. He was a husband, father and an active free mason who believed that people should unite as brothers within a nation and as a global community. He encouraged fellow immigrants to persevere through hope and hard work and to be proud of their Italian roots.

As an Italian American, I am proud of my heritage and this is why yesterday I introduced a bill today to posthumously award the Congressional Gold Medal to Giuseppe Garibaldi for his life's passions and accomplishments. My bill also commemorates the 150th anniversary of the Republic of Italy, which will be celebrated across Italy and the United States on March 17, 2011. Thank you to Congressman MICHAEL GRIMM of New York who is introducing the bill in the U.S. House of Representatives. It is my hope that this legislation will challenge us all to pause and reflect on the pioneering spirit, family and traditions that have made this great country what it is today.

TAA AND ATPA

Mrs. HAGAN. Mr. President, I rise today to urge the Senate to quickly pass a long-term extension of the Trade Adjustment Assistance, TAA, program for workers, as well as the Andean Trade Preference program. These programs make our workforce more competitive in the global marketplace and support jobs in North Carolina.

Both are critical Federal programs to North Carolina, and both expired this past Saturday.

North Carolina's workforce has been particularly hard hit as manufacturing has suffered, factories have closed, and companies have moved operations overseas.

The TAA program for workers offers benefits, including job retraining, to workers displaced by imports or a shift of production to other countries. Once a laid-off worker has exhausted State unemployment benefits, he or she can qualify to receive supplemental benefits under TAA.

These include weekly cash payments equal to unemployment benefits. To qualify, the worker must be involved in job retraining.

TAA payments can last for 52 weeks if a worker is in job training and 26 weeks more if a worker needs remedial education.

Many North Carolinians who have lost their jobs through no fault of their own have turned to our network of affordable community colleges to retool their skills.

Yesterday, I met with trustees for the North Carolina Community College System, which is among the best in the Nation.

These leaders told me how valuable it is for these laid-off workers to get a community college education and gain the necessary skills to be competitive in today's job market.

I agree wholeheartedly. Since coming to the Senate I have advocated to expand and enhance the TAA program for workers. In the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act, we significantly enhanced TAA programs by expanding eligibility and increasing the training funds available to States by 160 percent, or $575 million per fiscal year.

Earlier this month, I was among a group of Senators who sent a letter to leaders in the House of Representatives asking that they quickly introduce and pass a long-term extension of TAA, which is something they did in a bipartisan way last December.

Since Congress expanded this crucial program, over 17,000 North Carolinians have been certified for assistance under TAA.

Last year, displaced workers in North Carolina received over $56 million through TAA—the second largest amount given to a single State to help workers develop new skills and find new jobs.

Though we are making progress in turning around our economy, that doesn't mean much if you are one of the 430,000 North Carolinians still out of work.

One North Carolinian, Wayne Kizewski, is 42 years old and 2 years ago lost his job at a Cary company that molded plastic parts for Chrysler. Wayne used the TAA program to go back to school at Wake Technical Community College to study information systems.

Wayne was also able to receive help from the TAA program to pay for 80 percent of his health insurance premiums, including coverage for his 5-year-old son.

I hear from business owners all the time who tell me that workers in North Carolina have a work ethic that is second to none. When these men and women lose their jobs through no fault of their own they are determined to continue providing for their families, and this program allows them to go back to school and retool their skills for the 21st-century economy.

With our State's excellent community colleges, we can get our workforce prepared to lead the way in emerging industries.

The TAA program for workers is essential to maintaining our Nation's global competitiveness and supporting workers in North Carolina and across the country.

I would also like to address the Andean Trade Preference program.

I know my colleagues from Arizona and Ohio were on the floor earlier discussing both TAA and the Andean Trade Preference program.

I know that extending this program is important to my friends on the other side of the aisle. It is important to me too as this program has an impact on jobs in North Carolina.
