

program. It started during the George Bush era. Why? Because George Bush was President of the United States on 9/11, and he recognized the importance of doing this in a fashion that would maintain the civility of our criminal justice system.

I say to my friend, I want to make sure—I will repeat what I said earlier. No one is saying we are not going to do the Defense authorization bill. We are going to do that. But we are really, because of being jammed, as I have tried to outline here to the entire country, and being unable to get our work done here these last 10 months, we are trying to find time to do lots of things. That is why we have come up with this unique way of moving appropriations bills. We are doing them together—three at a time rather than one at a time—in an effort to do what I have been asked to do by the Speaker of the House: Do what you can to get these appropriations bills done. Senator MCCONNELL suggested something. We are doing our very best, but we have been held up from doing the ordinary business. I gave two examples that were about as good as you could give of our trying to do things to create jobs in America today. We have been stymied from doing that.

So I say to everyone here that I am really somewhat at a loss for words, for an organization here—the Republican caucus has done everything they can these past 10 months to stop us from moving forward. Remember, the No. 1 goal of my friend the Republican leader—and I admire his honesty—he said his No. 1 goal was and has been to defeat President Obama. As a result of that, we have not been able to do the government's business, because everything they can do to slow down government is something they believe will help them a year from now.

Mr. DURBIN. Would the Senator yield for one more question?

Mr. REID. I would be happy to.

Mr. DURBIN. Is it not true that the majority leader came to the floor on the pending legislation, the appropriations bills, and invited Members on both sides to bring their amendments to the floor, call their amendments for a vote, that some 10 or 11 or more amendments have been filed, and we are still waiting for that? Is it not true that we are giving this opportunity to our colleagues to offer their amendments and to call their amendments, and that is a way for those who are looking for their opportunity on the floor to express their point of view and get a vote?

Mr. REID. I appreciate very much the Senator from Illinois reminding me what took place at the beginning of this Congress.

Mr. MCCAIN. Would the Senator yield for a comment?

Mr. REID. As soon as I answer my friend's question.

I am reminded of what took place at the beginning of this year. We had a number of new Senators—relatively new Senators—who joined with some of the more experienced Senators who wanted to change the way the saw our having done business in the last Congress.

I joined with my friend the Republican leader and said: Let's back off a little bit.

The Republican leader said: We are going to be very discrete in what we do with the motions to proceed, to allow us to get on legislation.

I said: Fine. If that is the case, we will make sure we have the opportunity to offer amendments.

That has broken down big time, I say to my friend, because it is a rare day here that we have been able to move to a piece of legislation without having to go through the process of filing cloture on just the ability to get on a bill. And we have had open amendments, as we did on the small business innovation bill. Guess what happened. It was amended to death. So after 2 months—after 2 months—we gave up. We could not do that bill as had been done routinely in the past.

So I say to my friend, we are going to try it again. We have these appropriations bills. We are going to try to get it done. We are waiting for people to offer amendments, and we are going to try to move through this and get it done. We are going to do the appropriations bills this week. We have other things we need to do. It is an important time in the history of our country to show the American people we can work together. I hope that, in fact, is the case because based on my experience from the beginning of this Congress, where there was supposed to be a good-faith effort to return to regular order, it has not happened.

I would be happy to yield to my friend for a question.

Mr. MCCAIN. I want to say to the majority leader, whom I have known and been friends with for many years, I thank him for his kind remarks. I am very appreciative of his commitment to bringing the Defense authorization bill to the floor. I thank the majority leader.
